2 Courts Reject 7 Bids to Delay Watergate Trial

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON. Sept. 20 (IHT) .- Two federal courts today denied seven separate motions by defendants in the Watergate cover-up trial to delay the proceedings scheduled to start Oct. 1.

The U.S. Court of Appeals rejected six requests by former top Nixon administration and re-election campaign officials, who asked for the continuance on the grounds that they could not get a fair trial in the District of Columbia

And U.S. District Judge John Sirica turned down a separate motion asking for a delay on the grounds that former President Richard Nixon might be too ill to testify.

The six-member Court of Appeals, in brief rulings with one dissent rejected appeals by former White House Chief of Staff H.R. U.S., U.K. To Cut Air Service 20%

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP-DJ).—The British and U.S. governments have agreed to reduce air service between their countries by about 20 per cent, the State Department announced. The agreement was made to improve "the competitive climate" in which U.S. air carriers operate, the department said. It affects service between London and New York, Boston, Washington, Philadelphia, Detroit, Miami, Chicago and Los Angeles. The department also said that additional negotiations will be held with other countries to reduce other traffic over the North Atlantic. The next talks will involve the Netherlands, Belghim, Iceland, Switzerland and the Scandinavian countries. Carriers Set Talks

U.S. air carriers are scheduled to hold talks with the airlines of France, West Germany and Italy to discuss reduction of ser vices between those countries and the United States

The airlines involved in the U.S.-Britain agreement are Pan American World Airways, Trans World Airlines National Airlines. British Airways and British Caledonian. In some cases, the reductions involve canceling existing flights, while in others it means using smaller aircraft such as substituting a Boeing 707 for a Boeing

The reductions are divided equally among the carriers, the official said.

According to the State Department, traffic demand across the North Atlantic for the coming winter season will be 10 per cent to 13 per cent less than last year.

of the 12 governments. The Norwegian delegate invited his colleagues to go ahead with the agreement themselves pending the outcome of a Nor-wegian parliamentary debate on the accord. The debate is scheduled in three weeks. The agreement covers such subjects as stockpiling, demand, restraint measures, the need for a pooling of energy information and consultations with oil companies. It also proposes that a special agency be established within the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, which would have authority over oil-sharing if such a crisis plan were to be executed.

The trigger mechanism in the agreement would come into effect in two cases: If the whole group, which includes the United States, Japan and Western Europe, should be affected by a 7 per cent shortfall in supply or, alternatively, when just one or two member countries are affected by the same shortage.

Under the plan, countries cannot vote in favor of the "trigger," they can only vote against it. To reserve the trigger will require the "no" votes of 10 countries. This means, therefore, that the

Israel Opens Trial of Prelate On Arms-Smuggling Charges

JERUSALEM, Sept. 20 (UPI). -Israel put the Greek Catholic Archbishop of Jerusalem, the Most Rev. Bilarion Capucci, on trial today for alleged weapons smuggling to Arab guerrillas. The defense challenged the court's right to detain or judge him in formerly Jordanian territory.

After hearing arguments for both sides, the three-man district court adjourned until Tuesday consider the objections without asking the archbishop how he pleaded. His defense counsel. Aziz Shehadeh, said the clerio would plead not guilty to all the charges.

At the same time, Archbishop Capacci's counterpart for north-ern Israel, the Most Rev. Wilson Requests East Germany to Release 2 Britons

LONDON, Sept. 20 (AP),--Prime Minister Harold Wilson intervened with East German leaders today in an effort to win freedom for two young Britons jailed for trying to smuggle their lovers out of that Communist

Mr. Wilson sent a message to the chairman of the state council, Horst Sindermann, extressing official concern at the imprisonment of a British girl and a man who had become involved with East Germans. He urged Mr. Sindermann to exercise powers of clemency.

The two Britons are Susan Ballentine and Alan Watson, sentenced respectively to 5 years and 4 1/2 years in jail. They are in an East Berlin prison.

Miss Ballentine's sentence this week was for trying to amuggle her East German hoviriend out of the country in contravention of East German law. Mr. Watchose, some time ago, to settle in East Germany. Britain Says Jordan Admits Selling Arms to S. Africans

LONDON, Sept. 20 (AP),-Britain officially disclosed today that Jordan has admitted selling British-built Centurion tanks and a land-to-air missile system to South Africa. The Foreign Office said the clandestine deal, repeatedly deni-ed by Jordan, represented a breach of certain arms supply contracts. "We have left Jordan in no doubt about our strong feelings that British arms should have found their way to South Africa," an official source said. Arms Embargo Britain maintains a total arms embargo on South Africa to demonstrate its disapproval of that country's racial policies. The Foreign Office said in a prepared statement that the Jordanian government "has given us an explanation of the circumstances" in which the deal Was transacted

A spokesman added that "they

CIA Reportedly Subsidized Chilean Strikers

By Seymour M. Hersh WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 '(NYT').-The CIA secretly financed striking labor unions and trade groups in Chile for More than 18 months before President Salvador Allende was overthrown, intelligence sources revealed yesterday.

The sources said that the mafority of more than $7 million authorized for clandestine CIA activities in Chile was used in 1972 and 1973 to provide strike benefits and other means of sup-port for anti-Allende strikers and

In testimony yesterday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger seserted that the intelligence agency's involve-ment in Chile had been authorized solely to keep alive political parties and news media threatened by Allende's government. The claudestine activities, Mr. Kissinger said, were not aimed at subverting that government.

Among those heavily subsidized, the sources said, were the organizers of a nationwide truck strike that lasted 26 days in the fall of 1972, seriously disrupting Chile's economy and provoking the first of a series of labor crises for Allende.

Direct subsidies, the sources said, also were provided for a series of middle-class shopkeepers strikes and a taxi strike, among others, that disrupted the capital city of Santlago in the summer of 1973, shortly before Allende was overthrown by a military coup. At its peak, the 1973 strikes involved more than 250,000 truck drivers, shopkeepers and professionals who banded together in a middle-class movement that, many analysts have concluded, made a violent overthrow in-

The Times's sources, while readily acknowledging the CIA's secret support of the middle classes, insisted that the Nixon administration's goal had not been to force an end to the presidency of Allende.

The sources noted that a request from the truckers union for more CIA financial aid in August, 1973, a month before the coup, was rejected by the "40 Committee," the intelligence review board chaired by Mr. Kls-

Nonetheless, the sources also conceded that some agency funds inevitably—as a high official put

"If we give it to A, and then A gives it to B and C and D," the official said, "in a sense it's true that D got it but the question is-did we give it to A knowing that D would get it?" The official added that it was

"awfully hard" to maintain control over local field operatives, particularly when large sums of cash were involved.

A number of sources also explained that the CIA, by using the Chilean black market, was able to increase the basic buying power of the $7 million estimated to have been spent on clandesefforts between 1970 and 1973. The unofficial exchange rate, sources said, was as much as 800 per cent higher than the official rate, indicating that the CIA's cash could have had a local impact of more than $40 million:

Broad Infiltration Effort

The sources depicted the general involvement of the CIA with the labor unions and trade groups as part of a broad effort to infiltrate all areas of Chile's governmental and political life. The sources said that by the end of the Allende period, the CIA had agents and informers in every major party making up Allende's Popular Unity coalition.

A troubling failure during the latter part of Allende's power, the sources said, was the CIA's inability to infiltrate the Movement of the Revolutionary Left, the major revolutionary group outside the Allende coalition.

At his new conference Monday night, President Ford declared his support for the CIA involvement in Chile and said that it been authorized because "there was an effort being made by the Allende government to destroy opposition news media, both the writing press as well as electronic press, and to de-SECOA opposition political par-unions and organized strikes. "Of course, the agency tries to support the people who believe in its aim." he said. was going on." the official added. The intelligence reports coming to us were frightening. Allende would send Popular Unity representatives into a business and claim that the workers were complaining about high profits. "Then they'd take over the books and raise the taxes 50 per cent," he said. "It was a very brutal policy.

"So our idea was to prevent this from working and money was the way to go," the official said. "What we really were doing was supporting a civilian resis-tance movement against an arbitrary government. Our target was the middle-class groups who were working against Allende.

"The whole point of this is that covert action provides a 1 per cent impetus for something that the people want anyway," he said. "In a civilized country, the CIA can only make a marginal input. It takes a lot of money and-this is most important-you don't do it unless you're told to (by higher authority in Wash-

Some financial support for newspaper and radio stations was needed in Chile, the official explained, because "it wouldn't have been good to have strikes if nobody knows about it."

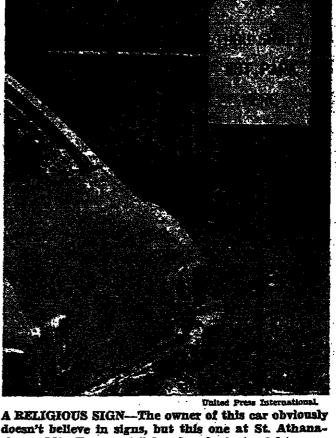

Most of the CIA funds invested for propagands purposes, the official said, went to El Mercinio. the main opposition newspaper in Chile. "It was the only serious political force among the newspapers and television stations there," he said.

"As long as you don't make it sound like we were trying to start a coup, it'll be all right," the of-ficial added. "You've got to understand that he [Allende] was taxing them [the middle class] to death."

U.S. Seaman Dies After Navy Called His Illness Imaginary

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 20 (AP).—Timothy Nunley, 19, who tried to convince Navy doctors that his illness was serious and not imaginary, died today of cancer.

Mr. Nunley was flown to Jacksonville Tuesday from Bethesda Naval Hospital near Washington and admitted to the Jacksonville Regional Naval Medical Center where he died shortly after midnight

Mr. Nunley and his parents filed lawsuits seeking $6.5 million from the government on the grounds that Navy doctors at three bases falled to diagnose his niness correctly until it was too late to operate.

In April, the Navy issued a statement admitting Navy doc-tors falled to diagnose Mr. Nunley's condition and saying that "appropriate disciplinary and corrective action has been taken." Mrs. Robert Nunley has accused Navy doctors of treating her son like a fool when he begged for their help.

"My son was humiliated and degraded. When he went to the Navy doctors, they told him there was nothing wrong; it was all in his head," Mrs. Nunley said in an interview earlier this year. Her son enlisted in the Navy last September and after passing a physical was sent to boot camp Orlando, Fis., where he first reported sick

He went to other doctors at Mayport Naval Station near Jacksonville when home on leave, and to doctors at Great Lakes Naval Station near Chicago

after being assigned there. "He had lost 40 pounds, had a three-inch mass sticking out of his abdomen, his vision was blurred and he couldn't eat, Mrs. Numley said, "But the doctor at Great Lakes told him there was nothing wrong, except in his head and warned, 'Don't come back here,"

Mrs. Nunley said that incident occurred on Jan. 7. Two days later, she sent a letter to the Navy and on Jan. 11 Navy officials discovered that Mr. Nunley was suffering from cancer. They said then that he might live only two weeks.

Risk of Breast Cancer For In Some Hypertension Dr

LONDON, Sept. 20 (AF).-Three yesterday suggest that the risk of breast cancer for women over 50 is three to four times higher if they are taking reservine and related drugs used for hypertension and psychesis.

The studies—made separately in Boston, Bristol, England, and Helsinki—were published in the British medical magazine The Lancet. It said that doctors "face some difficult decisions" as a resuit of the findings since the drugs have been in common use for 20 years, particularly in the breatment of mild hypertension. The drugs believed to be sasociated with breast cancer are derived from the roots of the shrub Rauwolfia Serpentina, which comes from India and which has been known for censuries in Hindu writings for its tranquilizing effects.

Scores of preparations on the market include whole ranwolfia root extract isolated alkaloids such as reserpine and rescinnamine, or rativolfia derivative combined with other drugs. "Do the therapuetic advantages outweigh the possible cancer risk?" The Lancet asked "In many cases the initial answer must be no. In the next lew weeks doctors must be reflecting on possible lternative treatments. The studies grew out of what was called an "entirely unsuspected finding" of a program carried out by Boston University Medical Center in 24 area hospitals in 1972. After the initial discovery, the findings were pursued further at Oxford University and at the University Hospital, Helsinki.

The magazine said that the con-clusion of all three studies was that the higher risk of breast cancer among reserpine takers was related both to dosage and the duration of treatment with rauwolfis derivatives. The reports indicated that women of premenopausal age were less likely to develop the cancers. Hypertension itself was not a risk factor, the studies said.

The Boston survey implicated rauwolfia as a risk in several rarer forms of cancer-of the brain, uterus, ovary, pancreas, skin and kidney—but no increased risk was detected for cancer of the hing or bowel

"Evidently," said The Lancet, "men, as well as women, therefore may be at hegard." The Boston study compared the spent 36 years under Japanese colonial rule, and none more so than President Park, who once was a lieutenant in the Japanese Army. It was to assuage Korean emotions that Mr. Shiina went to the Blue House, Mr. Park's executive office, for a meeting yesterday.

Japanese diplomatic sources said Premier Tanaka's letter ex-pressed condolences for the death of Mrs. Park, that Japan felt deep regret that the plot had been concocted in Japan, promised that Japan would investigate the plot and pledged its best afforts to prevent a recurrence.

Since that failed to satisfy President Park, Korean officials reported that Mr. Shima said Japan felt duly responsible for the incident, would sternly punish offenders in Japan and would do its best to prevent activities in Japan aimed at overthrowing the South Korean government. The Koreans also reported that Foreign Minister Kim wrote down Mr. Shiina's remarks, then asked the Japanese envoy to confirm which Mr. Shiina did. Each side can interpret and ex-

Moscow, in Reversal, Agrees To Nonconformist Art Show

By Hedrick Smith

MOSCOW, Sept. 20 (NYT),-Soviet authorities, who encountered an outcry abroad after the forceful disruption of an unofficial outdoor art show Sunday, reversed themselves today and told a group of nonconformist artists that they could hold another show next week.

A spokesman for the artists said that Mikhail Shkodin, deputy director of the culture administration of the Moscow City Council, had told four of their representatives this afternoon that the group could have a show Sept. 28 in the woods near Ismailovsky Park.

The site, on the northeastern edge of Moscow, is far from the area first chosen by the artists. Ismailovsky Park has been used for various exhibitions and is not far from the area that Moscow proposes as the headquarters for the 1980 Olympics.

After their first show had been violently disrupted by bands of vigilantes, some of whom were later identified as plainclothes policemen, the artists had appealed to the government for ap-proval for an outdoor show on Sept. 29.

Alexander Glazer, a poet-trans-

later and art collector who acts as spokesman for the group, said today that the artists had been surprised by the quick approval.

The four artists' representatives who met with Mr. Shkodin, he said, had withheld acceptance until they could talk with the others and inspect the site. Some of the artists were disappointed that a Saturday had been offered as a date, because it is a working day, instead of the originally requested Sunday.

Privately, the artists credited the international outcry touched off by the violent disruption of

The Russian's reply invoked Mr. Dulles's reputation for his anti-Communist foreign policy during his years as secretary of state in the administration of President Dwight Eisenhower.

Mr. Malik said that reviewing the charter would be "incompatible" with the idea in the document itself of strengthening international peace and security. He explained that a revision could undermine the Security Council veto power held by the five big powers-the United States, the Soviet Union China, Britain and

But Mr. Huang, arguing that the charter was drawn up nearly three decades ago, said that there have been enough changes to warrant a review. He accused Moscow of seeking to suppress the demands of Third World countries for a charter review. Assembly president Abdelazia Bouteflika, the foreign minister of Algeria, intervened with an appeal for "dignified serenity" in the proceedings.

Food, Oil and the President

Mations to the oil-producing countries does not, unfortunately, offer much comfort to the rest of the word. He suggested that no country, rich or poor, could escape the consequences of a spread of economic warfare. That much is certainly evident. But if there was an implication that the United States might retaliate against the oil producers through its food policy, that threat does not seem very persuasive.

"The attempt by any country to use one commodity for political purposes," the President said, "will inevitably tempt other countries to use their commodities for their own purposes . . . it has not been our policy to use food as a political weapon despite the oil embargo and recent oil-price and production decisions.' The sentence seems to hint: so far, at least. But the reality of the matter is that there is no way for America to use its food exports as the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is using its oil exports. It would be immoral to try it, and as a practical matter it certainly would not work. The oil-exporting countries' need for food is a very small proportion of world trade, and any attempt to operate a retaliatory campaign would promise enormous damage to hungry people in other countries. While it is true that the United States has not been using its agricultural exports as a political weapon, it is also true that the tremendous rises in U.S. agricultural prices have caused as much hardship among its customers abroad as among consumers at home.

The real threat to the newly-rich oil exporting nations is, rather, a world with no stable currencies in which to count their vast wealth, no safe investments in which to hold it, and no free and orderly markets into which to ship the goods that their own industrial development programs are beginning to produce. The real danger of unrestrained increases in oil prices is less a world depression than a general retreat into aggressively mercantilist and protectionist trade and financial strategies by governments as they fight to protect their own people's accustomed standards of living. That is not a prospect that any sensible person can welcome. But tit for tat retaliation by the United States seems very unlikely in the near future, if only because U.S. dependence on imported oil is still rising. America is currently importing more off-and specifically more Mideastern and African oil—than a year ago, before the Arab embargo. The President asks the oil exporting countries "to define their conception of a global policy

President Ford's warning at the United on energy." But they do not seem to have any global policy, other than maximizing their earnings in the shortest term possible.

Speeches at the United Nations do not, lamentably, seem to have much effect on events regardless of the high motives or high office of the speaker. President Ford's address covered some of the same ground as Secretary of State Kissinger's speech at the same place last April. Mr. Kissinger also called for world cooperation as the better alternative to economic hostilities. He too iaid heavy emphasis on the threat to world order contained in high oil prices and reduced food supplies But since then, the OPEC nations have steadily and repeatedly raised prices and, with the American drought this summer, world food supplies are lower than ever.

President Ford made the welcome announcement that the United States will increase its budget for food to nations in need. But he offered no firm figures. It seems that the actual amounts remain to be worked out as we go along, season to season, depending on the state of U.S. markets as well as the massive scale of need abroad. U.S. shipments of foodstuffs-mainly wheat, rice and feed grains—to poor nations ran to about 15 million tons a year in the mid-1960s. Currently they are less than one-fourth that level. In dollars, for the past several years, the program has remained in the range of $1 billion a year. But the price of wheat, for example, has tripled since 1972. If the President increases the spending on food aid by $500 million a year, the highest figure under discussion, that will be barely enough to hold shipments to last year's quantity. * * *

The President's address was a cautious venture into that part of his new office that is least familiar to him. Perhaps his listeners would be best advised not to search it for details and hints. It is wiser to read the speech for its broad outline, which leads to two points. First, the United States will not abandon its responsibility to send food abroad to alleviate hunger, even though the drastic changes in U.S. circumstances make that responsibility unprecedentedly difficult and expensive for Americans this year. Second, the OPEC governments would be well advised to remember that no one has a greater interest in international order than those countries that are small rich, vulnerable and increasingly dependent on access to world markets. Both of those truths deserve the most careful consideration by Mr. Ford's listeners at the United Nations.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Covert Abuses

President Ford's defense of "covert action" by intelligence organizations against foreign governments is faulty both in its particular application to Chile and as a general tenet of foreign policy. The belatedly-revealed campaign against the government of the late President Salvador Allende adds just one more example of how executive powers can be abused when the element of effective accountability is absent

Mr. Ford tried to put the most benign face upon the dubious Chilean exploits of his predecessor's administration at his Monday news conference, and again in meeting congressional leaders. Money was indeed spent to influence Chile's political process, he conceded, despite all the previous denials by senior government officials who knew better. But the President explained that this was done only "to help and assist the preservation of opposition newspapers and electronic media and to preserve opposition political parties." This explanation might be more convincing if there were any record of simflar concern for democratic opposition voices in Greece under the military junta, for example, or in totalitarian South Vietnam or South Korea today-or for that matter in post-Allende Chile.

The broader question is whether such covert activities were properly conceived and policed inside the government, the legislative as well as executive branch. Key congressional leaders who are supposed to be informed of such operations claim they were kept in the dark. Responsible committees of Congress were misled in sworn testimony by administration officials. Inside the executive branch the so-called 40 Committee for Intelligence Oversight, chaired by Henry Kissinger as President Nixon's national security adviser, reportedly orchestrated the anti-Aliende campaign, even as government spokesmen at all levels were insistently denying any intervention in Chilean affairs.

It is not enough for the President and secretary of state simply to brief invited congressmen on controversial actions once they become known, as happened on Thursday. As we have long advocated, the Congress should insist on more effective oversight procedures than have been exercised so far; one aim should be to break up the concentration of decision-making power in the hands of one man or a small group of anonymous officials under the limited accountability that, more than anything else, invites free-wheeling abuse of power.

It would be a rash statement to say that there is never a need for covert intelligence operations in the modern world, but stringent criteria must be established and enforced before resorting to such dangerous techniques. Lyman Kirkpatrick, one of the nation's most experienced intelligence executives, observed several years ago: "The use of 'covert action' for the implementation of foreign policy may be even counterproductive when successful; when unsuccessful it can be catastrophic."

Dealing With Terrorists

An unshakeable wish by the collective consciousness (of every nation) not to give in an inch to the sorcery and trickery of violence [by terrorists] is irreplaceable. Israel has understood it. Eastern countries as well. Is it then only in the West that one finds this spectacle of crazy disarray, and sees the proof of the weakness of an abstract self-defeating pseudo-humanism? . . . It is no longer tolerable to go on considering the responsibility for the death of innocent people as something shared, the responsibility rests entirely with those who deliberately kill children and take hostages. The slightest weakness in the face of this is an encouragement to new crimes.

End of the Treaty of Rome?

By James Goldsborough

PARIS-A different kind of Europe was being talked about following Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's dinner party last weekend, and the EEC commissioners who have been calling the new schemes a violation of the Treaty of Rome are quite right.

That treaty, the European Economic Community's constitution, made the commission into the EEC executive body. The Council of Ministers, the focus of attention at the dinner of the nine EEC leaders, has the power to accept or reject commission proposals, but it is the commission that is responsible for policy-

The commission has fallen on hard times. De Gaulle's old attacks on it as a band of expatriates now come from all sides, including the West Germans, who have made it the cruelest blow of Helmut Schmidt has been castigating the civil servants of Brussels almost daily, with Harold Wilson getting off occasional potshots and Prime Minister Chirac recently branding one commissioner's remarks as not worthy of a Frenchman.

Identity

The relative merits of the commission and the Council of Ministers is a subject of much debate. The difference between those two bodies is the difference between federation and confederation. The council is a group of national foreign ministers who meet to make common policy. The commission is "European," suprapational, and doners are supposed to lose their national identity when they go to Brussels. Mr. Chirac should read the Treaty of Rome before criticizing François-Xavier Ortoli, president of the commis-

But the evidence is that the powers the Treaty of Rome bestowed on the commission have in fact blocked, as much as anything, the political development of Europe. De Ganile would not delegate authority to a group of civil servants. In 1965-66, France boycotted the EEC for seven months because it did not like a series of far-reaching commission proposals (later all adopted).

Fifteen years ago, without De Gaulle, Europe might have become the supranational Europe of the Treaty of Rome. De Gaulle stopped that kind of Europe in its tracks, and today, the Europe Giscard d'Estaing, Helmut Schmidt and the British is taking on a quite different outline. If there was any meeting of

of the EEC at Giscard's dinner it was that Europe must start down the road to confederation without any thought to what might lie farther along. Even Mr. Wilson showed enthusiasm for the idea, and a close reading of the transcript of Wilson's briefing following the dinner astonishes in its pro-European tone. Though he snipes away at the commisgion, one gets the strong impression that Wilson wants to keep Britain in Europe, and that a confederation under control of the council is precisely his view of Europe.

Cornerstone

West German and French leaders alike now proclaim European policy as the cornerstones of their foreign policies. On Thursday, West German Foreign Min-later Hans-Dietrich Genscher told the Bundestag, "European unity is the central theme of our foreign nolicy."

Schmidt is providing much of Sources who attended the dinner said that there was a "prearranged signal" between Giscard and Schmidt that allowed Schmidt to open the talks with his revisionist plans. Giscard, when his turn came to talk, did the political philosophising on Europe while Schmidt talked of organization and economics. Wilson never mentioned the word "renegotiation." British sources said later the tone of the dinner was utterly "conoclastic."

The new plan goes something like this: The Council of Ministers, made up of nine foreign ministers, becomes the executive of the confederation, a kind of Ministry of Europe. The council would be assisted by a standing political secretariat and by the commission, which would become basically an administrative body, thereby violating the Treaty of Rome. Frement dinner me similar to last week's would help the nine national leaders direct the council's work.

In the interests of efficiency, there would be some softening of rule of unanimity in council voting, broadening the areas in which majority vote can prevail. This would not, however, go as far as the Treaty of Rome provides toward total majority rule. Once there was only De Ganile who opposed majority rule. Now West Germans, the bankers of Europe, are concerned about schemes the other eight nations might have to spend West German money, and the British, perhaps overplaying their North Sea oil card, want a veto for their oil. But council decision-making would in principle be improved. In the new plan, the European Parliament, which never has become what the Rome Treaty setout for it, would play a larger role, with its members, by degrees, becoming directly elected. It would legislate on European questions, continuing to control the community's ever-growing budget.

The key to the success of the plan, and to development beyond an embryonic confederation of nation-states, would be how well the overhauled mechanisms function together. Would the gears mesh? For example, what would the relation between the directly-elected European Parliament and the national parliaments? To what degree would the council be responsible to the European Parliament as the com-

U.S.-Cuba Relations: A Complex of Problem

By Morris Rothenberg

MIAMI.—The question of resumption of U.S. relations with Cubs involves a complex of problems which requires careful tion before a decision to go disent is made.

It is not simply a matter of recognizing Fidel Castro's existence the United States has long since done so, Nor is it a matter of a simple extension of the policy applied to other Communist states. Geography and history make the case of Cuba different.

Every U.S. administration since John F. Kennedy's has made resumption of relations with Cubs endent on the loosening of Coben ties with the Soviet Union, especially in the multary sphere. There has been no loosening of thes. The major feature of Soviet-Cuben relations since 1968 has been a tightening of the Soviet grip over every aspect of Cuban life, the increasing integration of Cuba into the Moscow-led socialist community of nations, and the shift by the Cuban regime from any show of independence to almost complete subservience to Soviet positions

For both Moscow and Havana, resumption of U.S. relations with Cuba would signify U.S. acceptance of the irreversibility of Communism in Cubs, of Cubs's ties with the Soviet Union and of the attainment by the Soviet Union of a permanent voice in the affairs of Latin America.

The costs of maintaining Cuba are high for the Soviet Union. That it is willing to incur these costs indicates that it considers the benefits equally high. Moscow does not discuise its belief that Cubs provides an opportunity to damage the United States in an area it describes as the "sira-tegic rear" of this nation, and at a time when U.S. need for, and dependence on, Latin American resources is steadily increasing. The Soviet presence in Cuba strengthens the image of Soviet power in the overall East-West

Thanks to its access to Cuban ports and facilities, the Soviet Union is on its way to becoming a Caribbean power. At least twice it has tested the limits of U.S. tolerance: most seriously during the missile crisis in 1962, but again in 1970 when it moved toward the establishment of a base in Cientuegos only to pull back under U.S. pressure. In addition, due to a Soviet input of some $2.5 to $3 billion, the Cuban military establishment is the largest in Latin America. The notion that the restoration of Cuban relations with the United States will open up important new possibilities for trade or reduce Havana's dependence on the Soviet Union is highly ques-

$5-Billion Debt

It is doubtful that anyone will be willing to subsidize the Cuban economy to the same degree that Moscow has. This subsidy currently amounts to $1.5 to $2 million a day. Cuban indebtedness to the Soviet Union now totals some $5 billion, a sum that by agreement Havana will begin to repay only in 1986 over a 25-year

PARIS, Sept. 20 (IHT). - For most Western art-market professionals, Japan means enormous financial resources and mystery. Most New Yorkers, Londoners or Parisians who have had prolonged dealings with the Japanese find their taste or. more generally, their reaction to Western wates unpredictable.

There is no mystery for Frenchman Gilles Neret, 40, the European manager for the Seibu trading group, which opened the only Western art gallery in Japan which has been and is thriving.

Neret, who is a journalist, turned to spend foreign curred to the art business while he culture, not commerce. was based in Tokyo for the Prench news agency Agence France-Press. Néret says that dealing just came his way. First, he was asked to contribute articles on fashion to Japanese newspapers. "I did it and I soon became regarded as an expert, People asked me for advice, which I gave informally. And then, when it happened more and more often, I started doing it on a paying basis." When, after three years in Tokyo, Néret decided to return to Europe in 1961, the Selbu group asked him to be general manager of its first European office, which, as a result, was set up in Paris instead of London or Dusseldorf, where most Japanese concerns had their offices.

Fashion and Art

"That is how I got involved in art. In the Japanese trade, fashion and art are inseparable." The Seibu advertising department consulted him on art exhibitions which they planned to do, at first for prestige. In Japan, Neret says businesses want to make money as everywhere else but money is not necessarily the first consideration

"What matters more than anything else is to organize something that will benefit the community—have a show of Western ark for example because introducing people to Western art is regarded as offering them cultural opportunities. Of course the advertising department expected news coverage and all that. But it wouldn't even have occurred to them to offer anything for sale—all the more so as the shows were planned in collaboration with national dailies, considered as cultural institutions. The dailies were allowed by law

EDUCATION

Wildenstein, amused by the wrangle, extended a helping hand without concealing his skepticism. But the success was enormous, and pictures sold. After another show, of Jean-François Millet's work, Wildenstein asked Néret to "take care of his interests in Japan." Fifty-fifty, Néret sald, on behalf of the Seibu group, and so it was that Wildenstein's Tokyo opened in 1973. This was a break with Wildenstein policy whereby the other galleries-New York. London. Buenos Aires—are 100 per cent Wildenstein-owned. A greater break still was adapting Japanese customs—while the But first read this ad! selection of pictures and commercial policy ultimately rests with Daniel Wildenstein as far

> In Japan, Néret says, you have to know a number of things. "You must remember that it is customary to sell not from your gallery but at your customer's home. You must respect the code. If you bring a few pictures to a buyer, the latter feels obliged to buy something. So that a well-behaved Japanese dealer always brings one or two masterpieces which he hopes to sell, and a couple of inexpensive pictures that will allow his client to perform his moral duty in case he should not want the masterpiece. It is very rude to offer only expensive pieces. And it is the neak of had form to bring an inexpensive piece that is rubbish instead of being a pleasing, although minor, piece. Neret says that several Western dealers made that mistake and it eventually proved fatal. Apart from the great many sophistications of general behavior thata apply to trading as anything else, one must penetrate intricacies of Japanese aesthetics. Some broad rules are fairly obvious although apparently ignored by other Western professionals.

The Japanese don't want largeformat paintings. They are not right for their homes and, anyway, it is not customary for them to hang pictures on walls. Néret says they are not much taken with religious subjects. He says his biggest mistake was Art Nouveau: the Far Eastern inspiration, far from appealing to the Japanese, drew their attention to the crudeness of Western interpretation.

They have an interest in sculpture, and often large sculpture. In the latest show staged by Néret on behalf of Seibu, which was organized by the Mainichi Shimbum, the Japanese daily, some remarkable ses were scored. A silver plate, 52 by 49 by 17 centimeters. signed by Picasso was sold for the stiff price of 60,000 francs, Cesar's bronze sculptures did very well because they combine modern flavor and figurative forms. Private collectors bought small masks and a Tokyo district acquired "La Victoire de Villetanense." a huge bronze figura of a woman, for 220,000 francs. It is not unusual for communities such as town districts or even smaller city areas to buy

Asked about present Japanese reaction to market difficulties, Néret feels that the depression of last spring is now over. He points out it was partly due to the Japanese internal financial situation. As Néret sees it, the Japanese buying spree of 1972, was prompted by the dollar surplus in Japan during which the government authorized unrestricted currency export. The Japanese dealers were then prepared to buy any second-rate Matissestyle art, he says, because the Japanese imitators such as Aoyama were anyway four times as expensive as the "originals" that inspired them.

Then, after November, 1973, when the dollar went up again, a monetary clampdown brought about a drastic reduction of Japanese art buys abroad. Some dealers who had no reserves in foreign banks had to cancel orders, contrary to Japanese practice. Now, Neret says, currency restrictions have been eased once again and Japanese dealers will be back in the

But, he warns, the "good old days" when almost anything could be offered by unscrupulous dealers, who got away with it, are over. The Japanese are in a different mood now; they look hard and check three times. They have learned their lesson and know that the code of behavior abroad can be vastly different from their own.

Néret's latest exhibition on Fauves is on right now at Selbu's and will later travel to the Ishikawa Departmental Museum. However, Néret concludes, the spanese don't like group exhibitions, they like shows. "So that will not be the best of tests."

ON THE ARTS AGENDA

The reorganized Opéra du Rhin opens its sesson Oct. 4 at Strasbourg with a new production of "Carmen" conducted by Alain Lombard, staged by Nathaniel Merrill and designed by Robert O'Hearn. The cast of the premiere is headed by Viorica Cortez in the title part, with Jeanette Pilou as Micaela, Gilbert Py as Don José and Armand MacLane as Escamillo. The production will also be given in Mulhouse on Oct. 6 and Colmar on Oct. 9, as well as five more times in Strasbourg in October.

Moussorgsky's "Khovanshchina," to be performed in Russian, will be the first new production of the season at the Hamburg State Opers, with Nicolai Ghiaurov and Martii Talvela taking the two principal bass roles of Prince Ivan Khovansky and Dosifel, and Christa Ludwig as Marfa, Horst Stein will conduct, and August Everding will stage the production, with sets by Andreas Majewski and choreography by John Neumeier. The performances are scheduled for Sept. 28, Oct. 1, 4, 6, 9 and 12.

An endless series of mng shots assembled into a manual designed to codify human features in order to facilitate the description of wanted persons. What is striking about all this is the emotions reflected on these faces standing accused before a lens and a 200 watt bulb: the terror of the young girl, the resigned failure of the old man, the defiance of some, the fear, open or concealed, of all. The eye of the camera is like the eye of God to them and each one, pinned down and isolated by the glaring light, reveals the resentful nothingness he is re-

Nutt's paintings are colored contour drawings — and good drawings, too, if a measure of quality is the artist's ability to realize his intention. The intention here is what the exhibition's catalogue calls stereotypes of "hokey lowbrow taste." Nutt sets his figures against plain back-grounds or patterned to simulate flowered linelsum or gaudy me-chanical stencils. It's meant to be shocking But it is just a tiresome

Waiting for Dinner

It is Christmas. The four are waiting for a dinner of turkey with no trimmings, since a frost has killed all their vegetables. In the background, colored lights blink on and off on a small Christmas tree that is otherwise bare. The occasion for them is as empty—their concern is only for food. There is no particular significance in the event, just as there is none in their lives.

play many meanings. It could be taken as a satire on rural communes, as a call for some sort of Walt Whitmanesque brotherhood, as suggesting a belief in, or a rejection of, the importance of ritual, as a work about the need for a historical consciousness, the necessity to understand and comprehend the past in order to live out the present. Or it could mean none of these things. Plays that can mean all things to all men suggest a confusion in the mind of the author. And, as a surrealist work, it lacks precisely the quality of surprise.

Moments That Work

There are a few moments that work. Stephen Moore's speech in which he recalls his childhood as a prison in which he was allowed to make no choices and from which he escaped through delinquency, so world where everyone—judges, police, social workers—seemed concerned about him, does brilliantly turn conventional thinking topsy-turvy.

And there's an absurd some in which Stephen Rea, standing on a chair, suddenly sees a fish on the floor—it has been thrown out of a bucket of well waterand is worried lest people think he's taken refuge up there because he's frightened of the fish. In his concentration on everyday activities—the characters give their full attention to such tasks as moving chairs or sweeping the floor-Mr. Shepard suggests some of the same realistic concern as Peter Handke, the be-

Hef that each human action is as important as the next, or as futile. The play has a nihilistic core, for its people are not complete: Their actions have no mind behind them, just as their thoughts have no body.

Under Nancy Meckler's stolid direction, the acting lacks vitality and Mr. Shepard's accustomtamed, making for a disappoint-

The play is full of undigested symbolism—its central character is a blinded IRA leader constantly making speeches about how it easier to see in the dark-and strains after poetic effect, with endless rhapsodizing by the minor characters, emerging from valued at about $25,600.

By Emanuel Perlmutter

Police officials admitted that there has been a recent increase in art thefts. They blamed it on the devalued dollar, the increased prices commanded by works of art, the willingness of some dealers to buy stolen items, and the rejuctance of the gallery own-ers to put bars on their win-

The dealers contended that to bar their windows would keep the works of art from public view, which they depend upon to attract customers

Detective Robert Volpe, who is the New York City Police De-partment expert on art identifi-cation, said thieves working in groups also were breaking into townhouses which possess valuable paintings and sculptures and selling them through members of organized crime who have the money and the contacts with those who can dispose of them. "Even the run-of-the-mill burglar is stealing art works." Mr. Volpe said. "Petty thieves who break into apartments and who used to be interested only in cash and jewels are now taking whatever art works they can find. The mug who used to rip off a store window to steal an electric toaster is now choosing galleries and antique shops for his target."

Last Friday, burglars broke a window in the Hutschneker-Hutton Gallery and stole a bronze aculpture by George Kolbe appraised at $15,000.

On Saturday, one or more thieves broke a window of the George Schwartz Ltd. Gallery and stole an antique lamp priced at $2,000 and four bronze figures estimated at more than $9,000. Two burglars smashed a window of the Walter F. Altshul antique shop on Sunday and stole two bronzes. However, they touched off a burglar alarm and fled, dropping their loot in the street, when a police car ap-

The company of 350 has not been paid in three months and employees said they would occupy the building "to the bitter end." A spokesman for the theater said today that spectators were given back their money for a concert scheduled last night by the Chicago Symphony, and two concerts to be given next week by the Los Angeles Philharmonic were cancelled in advance. The Los Angeles Philharmonic, directed by Zubin Mehta, will give a benefit for the striking employees in Venice or in nearby Mestre. The orchestra is touring in Germany and is due in Ven-ice Monday.

Frankfurt Bellet

The ballet of the Frankfurt Opera will make its first appearance outside Germany with four performances of two different programs in Birmingham, England, from Sept. 25 to 28. One program includes "Charades" by the company's director, Alfono Cata, to music by Schubert and Jacques Guyonnet, and a work by the troupe's ballet master, Kent Stowell to music by Scott Joplin and Stravinsky. The second program comprises Balanchine's "Serenade" and "The Four Temperaments" and Catá's "Perspectives," to music by Fauré. Mr. Volpe said that major works of art which were stolen were generally recovered because it was difficult to sell them. But he added that it was more difficult with those not sufficiently rare and known to arouse suspicion. He said the minor works usually showed up eventually in other galleries and antique shops.

Art in West Germany

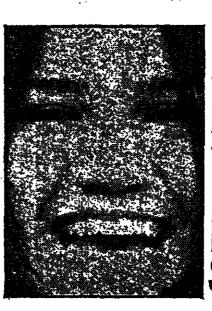

Among current and forthcoming art exhibitions in West Germany are "Photography as a Medium," Hans am Waldsee, Berlin (through Nov. 3); Tadaski Kuwayama, Folkwang Museum, Essen (to Oct. 8); Robert Rauschenberg, Haus Lange Museum, Krefeld (Sept. 25-Nov. 17); 22d Arnual Exhibition of the Ger-man Artists Federation, Mainz (Oct. 12-Nov. 24); "Committed Painting," Kunstverein (Oct. 15-Nov. 17), and "The Great Naive Painters," Haus der Kunst (Nov. 1-Jan. 12), both in Munich.

Is 'Alarming' SEC Official Warns Of U.S. Borrowing

Trend in U.S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (Reuters). - Securities and Exchange Commission chairman Ray Gar-rett jr. said today that the securities industry is in "an alarming downward trend" and that increased government borrowing added to problems in raising investment canital

In a paper submitted to Treasury Secretary William Simon, Mr. Garrett sak the Impact of beavier government borrowing should be taken into consideration in discussions about the economy and inflation

He noted that from 1971 to 1973, corporate offerings declined by $12 billion while U.S. government and government agency offerings increased by $9 billion.

A second factor that anti-inflation policy should consider, Mr. Garrett said, is that there is a close inverse relationship between interest rates on Treasury bills and stock prices. There is a close inverse relationship between interest rates on Treasury bills and stock prices, Mr. Garrett said. We think deliberations on the economy and inflation should take these factors into consideration." he reported. The securities industry, he said, is in "an alarming downard trend." Noting the losses suffered by New York Stock Exchange firms both in 1973 and the first half of this year, Mr. Garrett said "it does not appear that the industry is simply suffering

through the low point in this profitability cycle, offsetting the high point in the late 1960s. "Our preliminary data indicate that the return on equity in the industry currently is well below that experienced at the bottom of the previous cycle and about one-tenth of the median rate of

Grindlays Bids for Glasgow Bank

National & Grindlays Bank Ltd. is making a bid for British Bank of Commerce, offering 15 pence a share. National & Grindlays is owned 40 per cent by First National City Bank of New York. The bid values British Bank of Commerce's outstanding shares at about £3.3 million. Holders of 55 per cent of British Bank of Commerce's equity have agreed to accept the offer. The bank's directors, who support the offer, said in a statement that "under current conditions it is necessary for British Bank of Commerce to become part of a larger banking group and they regard the terms for the ac-quisition by National & Grindleys as fair and reasonable." British Bank of Commerce is a co:aparatively small merchant bank based in Glassow. It has required support from the major clearing banks because of a withdrawal of deposits prompted by fears over the solvency of what in Britain are termed "fringe banks."

NCR Reorganizes Internationally

NCR Corp., which derives almost half its total annual revenue of about $1.82 billion in the international market, is restructuring its international operations. The maker of data-processing devices, office equipment and other products says its operations outside the United States, will be organized into four regions—Europe, Mideast-Africa, Canada-Latin America and Far East-Australasia. Previously, NCR had fts international operations structured into 10

Cadbury's Sales Climb, Profits Slip World-wide sales of Cadbury Schweppes Ltd. so far this year have been "encouraging" to the point that the full year total ought to "put in a relatively good performance in relationship to the gains of 1973." Adrian Cadbury, chairman-elect, reports. Last year the giant British manufacturer of confectionery, soft drinks and other food and household products scored a sales increase of 25.5 per cent when sales climbed to a record £438.15 million. Unlike last year, however, profit gains apparently are not accompanying the sales increase. While the Cadbury executive declines to be specific on the profits performance so far in 1974, he did note that the company's Australian unit had reported a 43 per cent drop in first-half net income despite an 18 per cent sales gain. The Australian example represents an extreme case as far as profits are concerned but it could be expected that the company as a whole would have a similar experience," the executive says. He adds that the profit pinch is due to stiff price controls "a'most everywhere we operate except in the United States."

Mutual Funds Sales Rise in U.S.

Sales of mutual funds exceeded redemptions by $127.4 million in August, largely on the strength of continued investor interest in specialized money market funds, the Investment Company Institute reports. Total sales rose to $466.2 million—the highest level in nine months from $441.7 million in July. Redemptions fell $13.5 million to $338.8 million. Money market funds, which are invested mostly in government and agency securities, certificates of deposit and commercial paper, accounted entirely for the strong performance. Sales of such funds of $279.6 million exceeded redemptions of $50.8 million. In July net sales were $176.5 million. Total net assets of mutual funds, however, continued to decline, falling to $35.1 billion from $37.1 billion, reflecting the drop in stock prices.

The ratio of cash and equivalents to assets climbed to 14.1 per cent from 12.2 per cent.

Credit Crunch Ruled Out, Burns Says

Analysts See a Hint

Of Eased Money Policy WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (Reuters) -- Federal Reserve Board chairman Arthur Burns said today there would be no credit crunch in the United States.

He told a financial pre-summit on inflation that it would be inappropriate to further intensify monetary restraint and that a policy of moderate monetary restraint "seems appropriate."

Mr. Burns said that the growth in the money supply was still proceeding "at a faster rate than consistent with price stability over the longer term."

He acknowledged that present high mterest rates were causing hardships in the housing farming and small business sectors, but noted that no one could count on any long and lasting easing in short-term interest rates although those rates had eased recently.

The official said that inflation could not be brought under con-trol without some degree of hard-

The analysts took note of Mr. Burns's cavest about expecting any long-term easing in shortterm money market rates.

How to make the Surest GOLD Gains

New domestic production is going to be needed when the U.S. lifts its 40-year ban on private gold ownership. In a market which will need extra supplies of up to 5 million ounces yearly, the only major mine turns out less than 1/12th this amount.

Analysts at institutional services stress that making money grow apace with this development will require attuning venture capital to rising new production and to the bullion price itself— not to the obvious older producers whose shares recently reacted downward from a heavily over-bought condition. The unprecedented U.S. discovery and development boom which we see coming will offer informed investors low-cost ways of getting into both rapid-growth and high-yield situations. with RECORD EARNINGS forecast in 1974

Value Line looks at

In today's deeply depressed stock market, scores of stocks are selling at earnings multiples which would have been hard to

But many of these "low" P/E stocks have weak earnings, or are relatively obscure, and therefore offer little attraction to serious investors who now want to line up their "re-entry" strategy for a major bull market. However, The Value Line Investment Survey also reveals a number of well-known issues, listed on the New York Stock Exaccording to our estimates, have record-high earnings in sight for 1974. Here is just a sampling:

Ampco-Pittsburgh Corp. Clark Oil Continental Copper Colt Industries Cyclops Corp.

Leesona Corp. Occidental Petroleum Reynolds Metals Tesoro Petroleum Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel

Each of these stocks is selling at less than 3 times its estinated 1974 earnings. The average price of these stocks works but to be about $15, against average 1974 estimated earnings of nearly $6.70 per share-for an average P/E of 2.3 (Value Line Survey 9/6/74).

Each of these stocks, according to Value Line estimates, is expected to achieve all-time record earnings in 1974. On average, we expect this year's per share earnings to be some 85% higher than in the best previous earnings year of each of the

Each of these companies has sizeable sales. The 1973 sales of the smallest exceeded $90 million. The average sales of all ten last year were well over half a billion dollars.

IMPORTANT WARNING

Investors who believe that major market recovery is not far off, and are eager not to miss out on unusual "bargains," may be tempted to rush into stocks like these without further examination. We urge you not to do so. The list above is presented NOT as a suggested course of investment action but rather to illusrate the unusual condition of the market.

You need a lot more than isolated bits of information, intriguing as such evidence may appear. Indeed, we believe you should not seriously consider any stock (including those above) until you have checked the latest weekly Value Line Survey as to the stock's current...

- .) Rank for relative Probable Market Performance in the next 12 months—The ranks range from 1 (Highest) to 5 (Lowest); relative to more than 1500 other stocks under continuing review. (While not every stock will always act in accordance with its Value Line Performance rating, such a large majority have in the past for reasons that are logical that we believe you can weigh the odds heavily in your favor by taking these ratings into account before reaching your decision),
- b) Rank for relative investment Safety (1 down to 5);
- c) Estimated Yield in the next 12 months;
- d) Estimated Appreciation Potentiality in the next 3 to 5 years.

UPDATED EVERY WEEK

Every week, the Value Line Survey updates these key ranks and estimates—for EACH of more than 1500 stocks under continuous review-and presents, for each, its latest P/E, earnings and dividend data.

In addition, each of the more than 1500 stocks is the subject of a comprehensive new full-page report at least once every three months - including 23 series of vital financial and operating statistics going back 10 years and estimated 3 to 5 years in the

Whatever it is you are looking for in stocks, Value Line gives you more data and measurements with which to make informed judgments—on each of more than 1500 stocks—than any other investment source we know of. And it's organized for quick and easy reference. (With the latest weekly Value Line Survey, for instance, it would take you just minutes to check which stocks have current P/E's below 2 or 3 or 4 or 5.)

GET READY NOW

Today's market, in our judgment, is more deeply underval-ued than at any time since 1949. The unweighted Value Line Composite Average of more than 1500 stocks recently was more than 45% below its 1961 starting point.

Once a major market rise does get under way, it is likely to move with considerable speed in its earliest stage. Now, we believe, is the time to get ready, with deliberation, so that you won't have to rush in indiscriminately later on. No one really knows where the precise bottom will be or when. But we are sure that barring war or revolution, stocks cannot be far from rock bottom now. To help you prepare for maximum advantage, we invite you to accept the following special offer:

old Austrian novelist and through language and through the American market: a collection of three plays, "Offending the Audience," "Self-Accusation" and "Kaspar," and another novel, "The Goalie's Anxiety at the Penalty Kick." Handke is a securely established star of the German-speaking literary world, "the darling of the West German critics" (Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung), "long since the key figure of his generation" (Christ und Welt)

He first attracted attention in 1966, with an acidulous attack upon the "descriptive literature" that he considered predominant in West German fiction Since then he has himself produced industriously and managed to appeal to both the middlebrow press as an enfant terrible and to various highbrow camps. A "literary technocrat," in the words of one critic, he can draw readers from those who approach art politically (by his matter-of-fact, vaguely Brechtian rejection of conventional fiction's com-fortable (at) and from those more concerned with "pure art" (by his persistent concern with a blend of ostensible avant-gardism and self-conscious literary his-

Above all, Handke is an origi-nal, both in his work and in his person. His industriousness has been matched by the central-European critical establishment; two years ago, when he was only 30, there bad already appeared a 393-page anthology of essays on him, complete with a 35-page bibliography of books and additional articles deemed too insignificant to include in the book. His play "Kaspar" won Handke a good deal of attention in the English-speaking world as well. The title, "Short Letter, Long Farewell," of this novel suggests the bones of the plot: On a visit to America the Austrian protagonist receives a short, flat farewell note from his wife ("I am in New York, Please don't look for me. It would not be nice for you to find me"), then spends the rest of the book traveling across the country, sensing his wife's presence in a series of threatening, melodramatic inci-dents, and finally encountering her again on the West Coast where the "long farewell" is consummated.

Needless to say, the first-person account of the hero's wanderings is hardly meant to be the whole story, nor is it recounted naturalistically: Every time Handke ventures into dialogue he becomes a candidate for a bottom-of-the-page New Yorker item. But of course descriptive realism isn't the point here. Handke has a view of the world playwright. Prior to this novel, art, and this novel is part of that written in 1971, only two other attempt. Its hero perceives the books by him had appeared on world out of existential insecurity, his ego constantly shattered by outer reality (nature), inner reality (dreams) and time (chilling cinematic flashbacks). But "states of fear were for me ways to knowledge," and his trip through America "taught me to understand history by seeing people in nature and that made me happy." Through art, the hero hopes to organize his swirling perceptions into a form that can give him comfort or at least respite: A Mississippi steamboat whistle, "bestial and brutal" yet "proud" and "gran-diose" shakes him into a "dream of America" as "a moment of expertly organized resurrection, in which things around me ceased to be unrelated, and people and landscape, the living and the dead, took their places in a single painful and theatrical revelation of history."

The two central points of reference in a book full of references are Gottfried Keller's novel "Der grüne Heinrich" and the films of John Ford. In his continual, even obsessive, citations of Keller and Ford Handke identifies his book with the tradition of the German Bildungsroman (a novel in which the hero learns through his experiences) and with Ford's larger-than-life, heroic Americana, and yet siso distances himself from them ironically. Handke values Keller's Heinrich because "he didn't want to interpret things; all he wanted was to be as detached as pos-sible." Ford, who himself enters the book as a character at the end, assumes the role of patriarchal deus ex machina wearily resolving tensions between history and nature and husband and wife, and making possible the peculiarly inconclusive "happy end," as Handke called it in an interview.

The most immediately striking parts of this book are the moments in which Handke opens up Kafkaesque vistas-dreaming instants of remembered horrorand an occasional set piece, as in the description of the desperately doting lovers the hero encounters in St. Louis.

The sheer density of the injokes and cross-references and philosophical curve balls throughout this book will keep a generation of German scholars busy and happy. And there is an undeniable, intriguing fascination to it, one that makes one curious indeed about how Handke will evolve in coming years, It's just all very, very cold.

John Rockwell is a Times music critic with a doctorate in modern German cultural history.

How Pro Football Shapes Up This Weekend

Pittsburgh Wins, 8-6

By George Minot ir.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (WP).—Baltimore took first place from the New York Yankees last night. A slumbering giant for most of the summer, the Orioles completed a three-game sweep of the New Yorkers, giving them 2 humiliating 7-0

Dave McNally hurled hitless ball during the last five innings and ended with a three-hitter. The Orioles' 18th victory in their last 23 starts lifted them to a half-game lead over the Yanks and placed them three games ahead of Boston, where the birds will open a three-game set tonight.

McNally was superb in pitching his fourth shutout and his fourth straight victory. His 16th triumph gave him an 8-2 record since the end of July.

He was his usual cute self, tantalizing the Yanks with his mixture of breaking stuff and changeups and then, when they least expected it, he would sneak in a fastball.

Rudy May, the Yankes starter, kept pace with McNally in the early innings and was particularly impressive when he struck out three consecutive batters in the fourth.

But the next hitter he faced was Don Baylor, leading off the fifth, and Baylor drove a breaking pitch over the leftfield fence for the only run McNally needed. The Orioles padded their lead in the eighth with RBI hits by Paul Blair and Bob Grich and the Yankees fell apart in the final

SOVIET MISSILE—Canadian goaltender Gerry Cheevers watches Soviet-fired puck register Russia's only goal.

Canada Overpowers Russia in Hockey, 4-1

By Robert Fachet

TORONTO, Sept. 20 (WF).— Team Canada skated, checked and swindled the Russian national hockey team into defeat last night. The World Hockey Association stars emerged 4-1 winners, helped by a bad call that cost the Russians a goal.

Canada led, 3-1, early in the final period, when Russia's Vladimir Petrov lifted the puck over goalie Gerry Cheevers into the top of the net. But the hard rubber struck where the center support meets the cords and quickly flew out.

Goal judge Jack Schmidt flashed the red light, Petrov and his teammates jubilantly lifted their sticks and referee Tom Brown ruled no goal.

Russian coach Boris Kulagin protested heatedly and Captain Boris Mikhailov aimed repeated obscene gestures at the goal judge. His aim was as misdirected as most of the Russian shots. Brown thought the puck had hit the crossbar but the television replay proved him

It was unfortunate that the incident proved dominant, because Team Canada deserved the victory. The Canadians repeatedly swept past Soviet defenders for close, hard shots, but Russlan goalie Vladislav Tretiak back most of them with marvelous moves, just as he did in Tuesday's 3-3 tie at Quebec

Tretiak was beaten by Ralph Backstrom, on a superb goalmouth pass from 19-year-old Mark Howe, at 4:31 of the first

Andre Lacroix made it 2-0 at 10:49, jamming in a rebound of J.C. Tremblay's slap shot while the Russian defense vainly poked at the puck instead of clearing out the attackers. The score came with Russian Sergei Kapustin in the penalty box.

Bobby Hull, Tuesday's hero, made it 3-0 at 2:50 of the second period, converting a lastmoment pass from Lacroix as the two swept in on a lone defenseman.

Aleksandt Yakushev produced the only Soviet goal at 13:09, as Vladimir Schadrin fired a quick pass from behind the net. Tremblay wrapped up the scoringat least the goals that counted -at 17:03 of the final period on a power-play slap shot that was deflected off a Russian stick.

The Russians were frustrated by more than the missing goal. All night they found their forwards checked closely, then hammered by Canadian defensemen if they broke free. On the rare occasions when the Soviet team got a chance to score, Cheevers was equal to it.

New Bout Date Is Oct. 30 for Ali-Foreman

KINSHASA, Zaire, Sept. 20 (AP).—A government spokesman said today that the postponed George Foreman-Muhamad Ali heavyweight title fight would take place Oct. 30, but the champion would say only that he was pointing toward that date.

"I'm looking forward to that time as the possible date for the fight," Foreman said. He said that as soon as a bandage is taken off his injured right eye, his manager, Dick Sadler, would make a final decision on how well it has healed.

"He'll decide whether the wound is healed, and what my frame of mind is like," Foreman said, "He'll decide who, when and where."

By Gerald Eskenazi NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (NYT).—From the people who brought the world WHA, ABA, WIT, IVA, ITA and WFL, a new league unscrabbled itself yesterday—the IBA.

It is the International Basketball Association, scheduled to begin Jan. 13 with 10 teams in nine countries. Although the United States will not be represented officials estimated that

80 per cent of the players and 70 per cent of the money would "The players will be a cut below the NBA and ABA," said John Coburn, the new league's commissioner. He said the average salary on the 10-man rosters would be between $15,000 to $20,000. "That is less than European amateurs are getting," a league executive said. "But we couldn't afford to pay the amateurs what they're accustomed to receiving."

The league president, Don Regan, is a former volleyball star from the University of California, Los Angeles. Now a lawyer, he is associated with those who helped create the World Hockey Association, World Team Tennis, International Volleyball Association, International Track Association and World Football League.

This is the first time the group has gone beyond North America for its primary sites. There will be IBA teams in Tel Aviv, Rome, Madrid, Barcelona, London, Brussels, Geneva, The Hague, Lyons-Grenoble in France and Munich.

'To Tell the Truth'

WASHINGTON.—There is some question as to whether State Department and CIA officials told the truth when they testified in front of congressional committees concerning U.S. involvement In the overthrow of the Allende regime in Chile. There is even some talk of perjury charges being brought against high U.S. government officials. This could play havoc with congressional hearings, particularly where our foreign policy is concerned. If they can't lie, many State Department and Buchwald CIA types say, they may refuse to appear on Capitol Hill This is what could happen.

"Secretary Sangfroid do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?" "I didn't understand the question.

"We are going to ask certain questions regarding our foreign policy and we want to know if you intend to respond with honest answers."

"Hmmnn, can I consult with counsel? "Yes, you can."

"What was the question again, senator?"

"Do you swear to tell the truth the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?" "Is that a multiple-choice question?

"Just answer yes or no, Mr. Secretary. "Counsel advises me that since national security is involved I can't tell you whether I will tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth without consulting with Dr. Kissinger."

"There will be a 5-minute recess while you call Dr. Kissinger."

Five minutes later. "All right, Secretary Sangfroid, I will pose the question again. Do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?" "Dr. Kissinger says I can't swear to that unless you go into executive session." "We are in executive session, Mr. Secretary."

"Then could you clarify some-thing for me? If you ask me a question, do you expect me to give a truthful answer to it, even if it compromises the administration and the State Department and the CIA and gets somebody into trouble for making a stupid mistake?"

"That is correct." "Dr. Klasinger was atraid of that. I'll have to consult with him again."

Five minutes later.

"Mr. Secretary, we really do have to get on with these hearings, and in order to do so we have to swear you in as a witness under oath."

"Why can't I lie?" "Because it is essential that Congress be kept informed as to what this country is doing

"In Russia I could lie."
"We're not in Russia, Mr. Secretary. The Constitution specifically gives the Senate the right to advise and consent on foreign

"In order to do that we must have information from your department. You can see that, can't

"But if you know what we're doing and you don't agree with it, you'll have to do something about it. How can we have a strong foreign policy if you keep asking the State Department to tell you the truth?"

"Mr. Secretary, I must warn you that if you refuse to tell us the truth we shall have to hold you in contempt of Congress."
"But if I took the oath seriously. Dr. Kissinger could get very angry with me. The way I see it, if I'm convicted for lying. I can always get a pardon from the President. But who would give a pardon to anyone who told the truth to Congress?"

French 'Ecologists' In Military Dress

By Elias Antar

MARSAUCEUX, France (AP).—Maj. Gen. Roger Macchie at at his desk with arms folded, his blue-and-orimson personal standard propped behind him and his hat with four gold stars

The soft light filtering from the yard outside touched the campaign ribbons on his blue shirt and glinted on the assemblage of sabers along the wall. Gen. Macchia spoke of the thousands of "interventions" his unit has carried out, proudly mentioned individual exploits and confided that he had awarded 60 medals for "outstanding

"Please call in Lt. Patrick," he told his secretary. A snappy young aide in blue trousers trimmed with a yellow stripe came in, not quite clicking his black boots together. "Yes, major general?" the lieutenant asked with a quick

"Have the men get ready," Gen. Macchia ordered smoothly. Then he shot a quick glance at a visitor to see if he was im-Gen. Macchi, 52, is not a combat commander efficiently preparing to go on maneuvers, nor one of the French Army's senior officers about to conduct a tour of his base. He is the founder and unquestioned leader of the Rangers de France, a 2,800-member private group who wear uniforms, are organized under a 100-man general staff and are spread throughout the country. The Rangers' field base is in a kind of Canadian-style fort in this village 50 miles west of Paris, and they boast another training camp in southeastern France. The general staff has its headquarters in Paris.

The Ranger map of France is divided into 25 regionspatterned on the real military regions of France-95 subregions and hundreds of sectors. Reports from the field pass through a rigidly structured command system to the top of the pyramid the major general himself. "There is complete obedience from bottom to top, just like in the army," Gen. Macchia said with pride. Individual Rangers can refuse to go on a mission, but once on patrol they are bound to obey the officer in charge, Gen. Macchia explained.

"Reports that I want the Rangers to expand to 20,000 men before the end of 1975 are exaggerated," Gen. Macchia added. "We hope our group will have grown to only 10,000 by next

The object of all this is merely to protect the environment from the depredation of modern man, Gen. Macchia stated. But one Paris newspaper has published a dark hint that the Rangers are siming to be more than adult Boy Scouts.

"There are very active ecological associations and societies to protect nature, but they do not find it necessary to disguise themselves as military men," Le Monde said. "This is a power that already attributes to itself functions that are reserved for Gen. Macchia pointed out that the Rangers are not armed and heir manual specifically forbids them from interfering with the ordinary law-and-order functions of the government. "I don't want to be criticized for being a private militia or a parallel police force," he said.

But he stressed the need for discipline and determination for the furtherance of the Rangers' objectives, and hinted in a quiet voice that certain official circles in France "support us

With short, iron-gray hair and a trim mustache, Gen. Macchia is steeped in discipline after 25 years in the French

Army. He carned his campaign ribbons in World War II in-Syria and in the Moroccan and Algerian wars, then retired six years ago as a colonel. Besides the Rangers, he now has business and farming interests which he declined to specify.

The Rangers started out in 1971 as a horse-riding association and as many members as possible are still encouraged to go out on weekend mounted patrols in the forests. "It is forbidden to smoke on horseback," states a notice at head-

Gen. Macchia said he assumed the rank of major general "because in France it denotes the top leader of a military unit." Other promotions are handled by a 40-man superior council, and the rate of advancement is about the same as in The Ranger commander of Rouen is a public works engineer who is a lieutenant," he said by way of example. "He uses his personal helicopter in Ranger work. The commander of the real Rouen military region does not have a helicopter."

Gen. Macchia admitted that his group is recognized by the government only as a riding club, and that the national police and forestry departments have not asked him to send out uniformed Ranger patrols.

"But there are 80 environment protection associations in France," Gen. Macchia said, "and they are not on a national scale. We are, and we consider ourselves the army of these

"We bank on the fear that a uniform inspires. Ninety times out of a hundred, the uniform gets the law respected," he said.

His patrols watch for the beginning of forest fires, warn campers and others of the danger of pollution, and sometimes help traffic cops,

Last year, Gen. Macchia went on, Rangers carried out 5,000 interventions and filed reports which were the basis of his contacts with top government officials involved in environmental

The Palestinian discussion will be item No. 108 on the assembly acenda comprising 110 different subjects. An earlier draft agenda contained 113 items.

The present session's general debate, item No. 9 on its agenda, will open tomorrow. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger will be one of the first speakers, outlining U.S. international policies.

In addition to discussing the world's economic problems, especially the interdependence of energy and food crises, Mr. Kissinger is expected to devote part of his address to the situation in the Middle East.

Last week all 20 Arab states in the UN, and many African and Communist countries, requested that the Palestinian question be debated at the current assembly session as a separate item.

Yesterday, the Israeli delegate, Yosef Tekoah, warned the assembly that "the inscription of

Mr. Tekoah said that a debate on the Palestinian question "and its foregone conclusions, resulting from the mechanical and onesided majority, could deal a crippling blow to the current efforts toward a just and durable peace" in the Middle East.

He charged that the sponsors of the request for a special debate Palestine were in effect backing "another organization committed to the destruction of a member state of the United Nations," the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

The delegates of Egypt, Iraq and Jordan accused Israel of systematically violating the rights of the Palestinian people. The demand for a discussion on the specific question of Palestine was upheld also by the delegate of China, Huang Hua,

At the end of the exchanges on the Palestinian questions, the assembly president. Abdelaziz Bouteflika of Algeria, ruled that the request for a full-fledged debate had been accepted "without objection," disregarding the protest by Israel

A separate assembly debate on "The Situation in the Middle East" is to be held after the Palestinian debate, as item No. 109 of the agenda.

Honduras Death Toll Passes 5,000 in Wake of Hurricane craft and fuel is threatening the lives of survivors of Hurricane Fifi who have been clinging to trees and rooftops for more than four days, authorities said today. Authorities said the confirmed death toll from the storm had risen to 5,000 and they estimated that it might double. "There just isn't enough avia-tion fuel to carry out operations," an air force officer with the Honduran National Emergency Committee said. "We need helicopters desperately. There are only seven in operation." Another officer said, "It is an believable disaster. We need fuel and aircraft soon or we will lose thousands more stranded on rooftops and in trees."

A Honduran Air Force spokesman said that besides the seven helicopters there were only 15 fixed-wing aircraft available for rescue operations. The emergency committee estimated that 600,000 persons had been left homeless by the hurricane, which raked Honduras on Thursday with 110-mile-an-hour winds. Workers were burning corpses to prevent outbreaks of typhoid.

A committee official said at least 80 per cent of the banana. sugar cane and bean crops were destroyed. He estimated that at least 75 per cent of the homes and 90 per cent of the roads in the hard-hit northwestern sector of the country were destroyed by

The figures indicate that Hurricene Fifi will rank as the third or fourth most devastating storm in recent history. A cyclone in 1962 killed 300,000 in East Pakistan, the worst such disaster of the century. Hurricane Flora killed 7,800 in 1963 in Haiti.

- Towns Destroyed Rescue workers continued to find bodies in the town of Choloma where flood waters broke a dam, sending a wall of water, earth and rocks crashing down onto the town as its inhabitants slept. Officials said 2.760 corpses have been found there so far. The town had an estimated population of 5,000 to 7,000. "The waters of the rivers that run past Choloma were unable to flow into the sea due to the waves whipped up by Hurricane Fifi, an official said. The water backed up in the form of great waves that undermined a hill close to Choloma, which served as a temporary dam, When the dam burst it cast earth, water and rocks on the town.

Pentagon Studies Cut of A-Weapons in Europe

By John W. Finney

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 (NYT). -The Defense Department has begun the first serious study in the postwar period on whether to reduce the large stockpile of nuclear weapons stationed in Western Europe.

The assumption among senior defense officials, including Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger, is that the study will lead to the conclusion that on strictly military grounds some of the nuclear weapons can and should be withdrawn.

The problem, however, is regarded by Defense and State Department officials as more political than military. The underlying question, as seen by officials, is whether the atomic stockpile can be reduced without causing political consternation among the European allies, who in an ambivalent way have become dependent upon the regional nuclear deterrent supplied by the United States.

"It almost boils down to a question of whether we can wean them, particularly the Germans, away from their present dependence to the point that they realize the withdrawal of some of the weapons doesn't mean we are giving up the nuclear deterrent," an official said.

The United States has about 7,000 nuclear warheads stationed in Western Europe—a number that has assumed a symbolic importance in European eyes ever since it was first publicized by former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara in 1966.

By official definition, all are "tactical" nuclear weapons, al-though many of them are far more powerful than the atomic bomb that destroyed Hiroshima. They range from artillery shells and warheads for short-range missiles to large bombs that can be carried by fighter-bombers to prearranged targets in Eastern

About 80 per cent of the warheads are tactical weapons-such as missile warheads and airplane bombs-that can be used either offensively or defensively. remainder are strictly defensive weapons, such as warbeads for anti-aircraft missiles and demoli-

official breakdown, apparently the majority of the weapons. while technically under American control, have been assigned to allied forces for use in event of war. This was suggested in a Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff report, which noted that the weapons are stored at more than 100 sites in Europe. with two-thirds of the sites containing weapons to be used by European forces. In a symbolic sense, officials believe, the 7,000 warheads have analogous to the 300,000 American troops stationed in Europe. Just as American and European officials have come to regard any as signaling a reduced American commitment to the Atlantic alliance, so European officials have come to view any reduction in the nuclear stockpile below 7,000 as a weakening of the American nuclear deterrent in Europe.

Kissinger Reportedly Silent On CIA Aid to Chilean Unions

By Seymout M. Hersh

(NYT).—Secretary of State Henry Kissinger did not reveal the extent of the CIA's involvement with labor unions and trade groups in Chile during separate briefings last week of congressional leaders and the Cabinet, reliable sources have reported. The sources said Mr. Kissinger offered an emotional defense of the CIA's clandestine operations in Chile during the regular Tuesday morning cabinet meeting, explaining that "all we did was support newspapers and political opponents of Allende who were under siege."

A similar description of the CIA's role was offered by President Ford in a television news conference Monday and again by Mr Kissinger during testimony Thursday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The New York Times has reported that the CIA secretly financed striking labor unions and trade groups for more than 18 months before the government of President Salvador Allende was overthrown last September.

$8 Million Authorized More than half of the $8 million authorized for covert CLA operations during the three-year presidency of Mr. Allende was used to finance and provide support payments for striking middie-class workers the Times's sources said.

In the cabinet meeting, according to an administration source. Mr. Kissinger gave some examples of the type of clandestine activities underwritten by the CIA-dealing with direct aid to an allegedly threatened newspaper and anti-Allende politi-

The source said that some

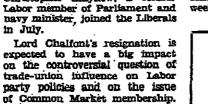

WASHINGTON Sept. 22 cabinet members noted at the time that Mr. Kissinger was telling them, in effect, "here's the kind of thing we did" and did not specifically reveal what actually had been undertaken. At no time during the meeting, the source said, did Mr. Kissinger mention the financing of laborunion or trade groups. The secretary of state also told the cabinet members, the source said, that the CIA's total investment in Chile since 1964about $11 million-was "marginal." Other sources have told the Times, however, that the CIA operatives in Chile were able to exchange the American dollars on the black market at levels up to 800 per cent higher than in commercial banks - suggesting that the investment could have a local impact of more than $40 million.

Mr. Kissinger served as former President Richard Nixon's national security adviser when the initial decisions about Chile's future were made in 1969 and 1970 and also was chairman of the 40 Committee, a high-level intelligence panel that oversees and authorizes clandestine CIA activity.

During classified testimon; last September, shortly after Mr. Allende's overthrow, Mr. Kissinger did not tell the Foreign Relations Committee of the CIA's involvement with unions and trade groups. He depicted the agency's role in Chile as "very minor" and said the efforts there were aimed at strengthening the "democratic political parties."

Congressional sources, in separate interviews, similarly said Friday that there had been no (Continued on Page 2, Gol. 2)

expected to have a big impact on the controversial question of trade-union influence on Labor party policies and on the issue of Common Market membership. The Conservative party has been accusing the Labor government of being under the domination of the trade unions, most of which oppose Britain's membership in the EEC. The Labor government has said it will renegotiate the terms of Britain's membership.

Lord Chalfont's resignation is expected to be used by the Conservative party in election-campaign criticism of the Labor

Listing his objections to wide areas of Labor policy, Lord Chalfont said in his letter: "I could not, in all these circumstances, declare myself in favor of the return of a Labor government." Lord Chalfont was not given any office in Mr. Wilson's present minority government. Lord Chalfont, 54, played an important part in the negotiations which led to the 1968 East-West treaty to ban the spread of

By Bernard Gwertzman WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 (NYT). -For the first time since becoming secretary of state, Henry Kissinger has found himself a target of sharp criticism on Capitol Hill

These attacks, and some reports about tensions between Mr. Kissinger and President Ford's staff, have caused concern to Mr. Kissinger's aides, some of whom believe that the secretary's yearlong cordial relations with both Democrats and Republicans may be in trouble.

At the closed-door Senate Democratic caucus on Thursday, for instance, Mr. Kissinger was forced to defend himself against heated rebukes, the first time this has ever happened.

But the same aides insist that Mr Kissinger preparing for a hectic round of meetings at the United Nations during the next two weeks and a busy month of foreign travel in October, has not lost his composure,

Mr. Kissinger has not held a news conference or given any onthe-record interviews for more than a month

An nide said that Mr. Kissinger was pleased with Mr. Ford's unexpected remarks to the UN General Assembly on Wednesday, praising the secretary of state and thereby seeking to halt rumors about his future.

"It should be emphatically understood that the secretary of state has my full support and the unquestioned backing of the American people," the President

This, however, had no influence on several senators who sharply criticized Mr. Kissinger the next

"The secretary sees the President more hours each day than he did President Nixon," the side said. "It's partly a tutorial session to bring Ford up to snuff on current issues. Right now it's Soviet relations; last month it was the Middle East.

France Disputes Spain on ID Cards

PARIS, Sept. 22 (Reuters).— France said today that Spain's decision to require valid passports from all French citizens entering Spain is in conflict with an agreement signed in 1966.

The Foreign Ministry recalled that the 1966 agreement, which allowed nationals from both countries to cross the border on presentation of identity cards, could not be denounced unless a two-month notice was given before its yearly automatic renewal. The Spanish Cabinet on Friday introduced the measure to try to prevent alleged Basque autonomists from using French territory as a base for operations in Spain.

Starting almost 20 years ago, the stockpile was built up under a strategic concept, which in some ways still applies, that, if necessary to save Western Europe against a Soviet invasion, virtually all the warheads would be used at the same time.

Coincident with this strategic reappraisal has come a concern -more in Congress than in the executive branch-over the physical security of so many nuclear warheads scattered throughout Europe. What finally provoked a fullfiedged study was an amendment ization bill this year by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga, who is regarded among his colleagues as a rising authority on military matters in the Senate.

The Nunn amendment freezes the nuclear stockpile at its present size while the Defense Department carries out a review of nuclear strategy and requirements in Western Europe. He said in an interview that he had offered the amendment because the present nuclear stockpile in Europe had "just accumulated over a period of years," with its size arrived at "not on the basis of any logical analysis."

800 Million Said to Need Mor

By Edwin L. Dale Jr. WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 (NYT) -The World Bank said today that, without a major effort by the richer nations, about 800 million impoverished people

It added that, based on present programs of aid for the poor countries, "it appears almost inevitable that, at least in the ahort run the flow of concessionary aid will decline even further in real terms"—after

It was another record year for lending by the bank and its "soft loans" affiliate, the International Development Association The $4.4 billion in new loans, of which $1,1 billion was from the affiliate, totaled substantially more than the purely economic development part of the dwindling U.S. foreign aid program However, the Unit-ed States has contributed 40 per cent of the development association's funds, a share which is about to drop to 33 per cent.

The bank's report this year stressed the "momentous change in the international economy brought about by the explosion of world oil prices, general inflation and a "major upheaval in global economic relationships," It added, "Through the resulting confusion and controversy,

The probe has since been expanded and deepened, the sources said to include all of Mr. Rebozo's sources of income and expenditures. The investigation is being conducted in an unusually secret manner, a source said, because of the high degree of public interest surrounding Mr. Nixon's

Mr. Nixon himself appeared to be particularly sensitive about the special prosecutor's interest in Mr. Rebozo, the source said. Many of Mr. Jaworski's staff members believe that the deci-sion to look into Mr. Rebozo's dealings precipitated Mr. Nixon's decision to fire Mr. Jaworski's predecessor, Archibald Cox.

At first, Mr. Jaworski's office even kept secret the fact that Paul Michel, former deputy dis-trict attorney of Philadelphia, had been hired to direct the probe under the overall supervision of Thomas McBride, who heads the office's campaign contributions task force.

Led by IRS Agents

A source said the Reboso investigation would be completed in the next six months. It is being conducted primarily by Internal Revenue Service agents and financial records and those of some of his associates and of the Key Biscayne Bank, which he heads, the sources said.

In the past, probes of Mr. Rebozo's finances have been hampered by his use of cash or his refusal to turn over records, investigators said.

At the bank for example, he pays the salaries of himself and of his employees in cash, the Senate Watergate committee

The broadened investigation is to determine if Mr. Rebozo reported too little of his income for tax purposes, claimed im-proper deductions or violated bribery laws, sources said.

Investigators are said to be looking into the large cashier's checks issued by Mr. Rebozo's bank So far, they have been unable to locate any record to show why the money was withdrawn or on whose account. If they continue to fall to find justification for the withdrawals, a source said, this could mean that money was being stolen or laundered through the bank.

The investigators are also seeking to determine if Mr. Rebozo has any undisclosed bank ac-counts in foreign countries and they are checking on his relationship with Resorts International, Inc., which owns a gambling casino on Paradise Island in the Bahamas.

Ford's Son, 18, In Violation Of Draft Law

By Diane Henry

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 (NYT). -Like hundreds of other young men in the country. Steven Ford. has technically violated the law by failing to register with his local draft board on time

He did not register until after his father became President. By law, he was required to report to his draft board not later than 30 days after his 18th birthday Since he was born on May 19, 1956, he should have presented himself to the board before June 19, 1974

Records at the local draft board here show that he reported Aug. 30, more than two months late. The general Selective Service policy is not to presecute a man who is two or three months late in registering, according to the general counsel for Selective Service, Peter Straub, However, he said that some men had been prosecuted for registering late. Steven Ford, who is working on a ranch in Utah, was unavailable for comment. However, an aide to Helen Smith, the press spokesman for the family, said: "It really slipped his mind. It's nothing more than that. There were a lot of things going on with his father at that time"

The side also said that, when he did register, it was at his high school where he was graduated in June. "He was very apologetic, but they said, 'Don't worry, it happens all the time." the side

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 (WP). Two weeks after President Ford joited the public by abruptly pardoning former President Richard Nixon, Mr. Ford's intimates are conceding privately that the pardon's timing was a grave mistake which has seriously damaged the early period of the Ford presi-

Associates reconstruction events leading to the pardon suggests clearly that the emotional condition of Mr. Nixon was very much a factor in the President's decision. Reconstruction also is strongly supportive of Mr. Ford's statement that he arrived at the decision himself and not as the result of any prearranged agreement with Mr. Nixon.

At the same time, the private statements of Mr. Ford's defenders raise serious doubts about the new President's political acumen and his ability to formulate a decision-making process on critical and controversial issues.

Presidential aides gave more than a hint that Mr. Ford displays great stubbormess once he has convinced himself of the necessity for some action.

"We wanted him to wait until they had at least drawn blood from Mr. Nixon's heel through an indictment," an aide said. The President didn't want to wait, He had concluded that the issue always would be controversial and that he might as well

This was the main reason cited by Mr. Ford in his statement to newsmen Sept. 8 when he granted the pardon.

To procrastinate, to agomize and to wait for a turn of events that may never come . . . is itself a decision of sorts and a weak and potentially dangerous course for a president to follow," Mr. Ford said then.

Aides recalled that when the President had first mentioned the idea of a pardon he seemed already to have decided to issue it. An aide said that, late on Sept. 6, and early the next day, Mr. Ford was insistent on the idea of announcing the pardon on the night of Sept. 7. He was dissuaded, the aide said, only when he became convinced that the mechanics of preparation would require another day.

This aide said that the pardon was shrouded in tight security because of fears that Mr. Nixon might not accept it-as strange as this contention might seem outside the White House.

"There was the danger that Nixon would say ... Tm innocent and will fight it out," a Ford aide recalled. "In that event, the humiliation to President Ford would have been even greater."
Partly because of what Mr.
Ford regarded as the uncertainty of Mr. Nixon's reaction, the new President wasted no time. Hs instructed his emissary to Mr. Nixon's California home, Washington attorney Benton Becker, to return to the capital as soon as Mr. Nixon had signed an agreement which gave the former president control over White

According to one of Mr. Ford's geles on Sept. 6 and arrived at the White House without having close friends, the "health thing" had a lot to do with the pardon entresty from the Nixon family or Gen. Haig. ment and the pardon with Mr.

The account of Mr. Ford's defenders could be summarized this way: the President was aware of physical and emotional problems facing Mr. Nixon. He was profoundly grateful to him for signing and believed that the American people would forgive him in exile.

When weeks passed and it became apparent that Mr. Nixon faced trial and that the issue would not go away, Mr. Ford determined to end the trauma, as he believed, by pardoning him. He consulted few people and was not dissuaded by aides who argued that it involved poor timing. The lack of wide consultation and refusal to heed advice are miestionable politically but not on grounds of honesty.

Mr. Ford's advisers now privately agree that he did not realize that his decision would keep the issue going rather than put it behind him or the na-

Hunt Says Prosecutor Barred Watergate Testimony Deal

By John M. Crewdson

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 (NYT).

—One of the original Watergate defendants has said that a month before the 1972 presidential election he was willing to tell all he knew about the origins of the bugging plot in exchange for leniency but that his offer was turned aside by the chief prosecutor in the case. Howard Hunt jr., who eventually pleaded guilty to charges stemming from the Watergate breakin, said that in early October, 1972, his attorney, William Bittman, approached Earl Silbert. then the principal assistant U.S. attorney here, "and suggested a 'deal' by which I would testify fully to my knowledge of the White House and Nixon campaign sides face trial Oct. 1 on charges of illegally covering up respon-

In his book, subtitled "Memoirs of an American Secret Agent," Hunt wrote that Mr. Silbert's response to the offer, "as reported to me by Bittman, was that he did 'not need' my testimony, as he had sufficient evidence to convict all seven defendants." Hunt and four other defendants pleaded guilty at the first Watergate trial in January, 1973, and two Nixon campaign officials. Gordon Liddy and James McCord jr., were convicted. Hunt, who is free pending an appeal, wrote that Liddy had told him that Mr. Mitchell had urged the break-in at the Watergate. Mr Silbert and his two assistants on the case, Seymour Glanzer and Donald Campbell, have been accused by some members of Congress and elsewhere of failing to pursue from the begin-ning the possibility that higher-ups at the Committee for the Re-Election of the President and the White House helped plan the Watergate bugging or cover up the responsibility for it.

Mr. Silbert, now the acting
U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia, was nominated earlier this year by Mr. Nixon to fill that post on a pamanent basis. The scope of the Watergate prosecution over which he presided was a major issue at his confirmation hearings

Hearings Adjourned

The Senate Judiciary Committee adjourned those hearings without a recommendation on the appointment. Last week, President Ford lent his endorsement to the nomination. Committee sources could not say when the hearings might be resumed.

In the first round of hearings, Mr. Silbert testified at length about his strategy of obtaining fendants in the Watergate breakm. This strategy was to seek court orders protecting the seven from self-incrimination, then compel their testimony before a federal grand jury.

However, it was not until the spring of last year, several months after Mr. Nixon's landslide victory, that the seven were finally taken before the Watergate grand jury under grants of immunity. The principal difficulty in cracking the Watergate case, Mr. Silbert testified, was the lac' of cooperation from the seven original defendants, particularly Hunt, Liddy and McCord, who were

Policemen Hurt In Boston Melee

BOSTON, Sept. 22 (AP) .-- Two policemen were struck by a newspaper truck and the driver was arrested last night when anti-busing demonstrators tried to prevent the Boston Globe from distributing its Sunday newspapers. The police said that about 1,000 demonstrators, angered by the newspaper's coverage of integration of city schools, blocked exits to the printing

About an hour later, a police car was fired upon at Columbia Point, a predominantly black housing project about a half mile from the newspaper building. The police scaled off the area.

At the Globe, the police at first pushed the picketers away from the gates, and two trucks loaded with newspapers left the building successfully. But, when a third truck left the plant, the crowd swarmed around it and two officers trying to hold the people back were knocked down

Congress Unit Backs Ford on Spending Curb

(NYT).—The congressional Joint Economic Committee yesterday unanimously supported President Ford's decision to hold total fed-eral spending at or below $300 billion in the current fiscal year. Beyond that, the committee failed to agree on most issues in a special report on inflation that was requested by the President.

While urging that total spending be held to $300 billion, which is $5 billion below the latest estimate for the fiscal year, a majority of the committee favored three costly programs—a big increase in public-service em-ployment if the jobless rate eaches 6 per cent, improved unemployment-compensation benefits and higher Social Security benefits for the elderly poor.

These proposals prompted the committee's vice-chairman, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., to say in a footnote of dissent that "Other federal spending must be reduced to offset the cost of these programs or the country will be plagued again with the nightmare, skyrocketing deficits of recent years.'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 mittee, Rep. William Widnall, R-N.J., favored a return to wage and price controls. The majority. instead, proposed a plan of action for the new Council on Wage and Price Stability almed at inducing restraint in the private economy without controls.

Moscow Artists Spurn Show Date Set by Officials

MOSCOW, Sept. 22 (UPI).-A group of abstract artists who staged an abortive outdoor exhibition last week have decided against accepting an official offer to hold the showing Saturday, one of the artists said today.

Painter Oskar Rabin said 14 of the artists met last night and unanimously agreed to turn down the invitation. Mr. Rabin said the group wanted instead to hold the open-air exhibit Sunday, when more people would have a day off and could view the artists' work.

An attempt by the painters and sculptors to hold an exhibit last Sunday in a vacant lot on the edge of Moscow was broken up by buildozers, water trucks and vigilantes. Exhibitors and Western newsmen were beaten and at least five persons arrested, including Mr. Rabin. They were later released

In a surprise turnabout, Moscow city authorities agreed Friday to permit the artists to hold the Saturday showing in Ismailovsky Park, a large public area on the northeast side of the city. Three of the artists will meet officials

MOSCOW, Sept. 22 (NYT).-A leading Soviet foreign affairs journal charged yesterday that leading Western universities, such as Columbia and Harvard, were harboring Soviet studies departments which were involved in a subversive ideological struggle against Communism and the Soviet Union.

It was the second attack within a week in the Soviet press on university-sponsored research on Communist affairs in the United States. On Wednesday .. Writers Union weekly carried an article attacking research on the Soviet space program, done at the University of Miami in Florida. The attack on Soviet research

Crédit Agricole -A few Facts about France's top Credit Institution

Crédit Agricole, an important shareholder in London & Continental Bankers Ltd., ranks among the world's top five financial organisations. With about 17% of total French banking deposits and around 8,800 local banking offices it is the leading credit institution in France.

Caisse Nationale de Crédit Agricole coordinates and promotes activities carried out by the Group's Regional Banks, which are established throughout France's governmental departments. In addition, it assists them in executing major credit operations, collects funds and manages financial resources.

Crédit Agricole actively supports regional development, provides finance for agriculture, industry and commerce, mostly in rural areas. It also offers full retail banking services with special emphasis on the furthering of savings.

It is authorized to issue its own long term securities and is at the same time a competent partner in international finance. Numerous subsidiaries provide varied additional services, be it in the fields of merchant banking, investment advice or travel.

Through its participation in London & Continental Bankers Ltd., CNCA took a major step to broaden its international presence. Its domestic strength and vast financial capacity place it among the top addresses in international banking.

Faisal's View of Saudi Arabian Ties to U.S.

Borchgrave—Saudi Arabia and the United States now have a 'special relationship' which is being institutionalized in all fields from defense to finance and technology-and which has been compared to the special relationship that the United States had with Britain during and after World War IL. Will this relationship have a life of its own-or does it remain contingent on America's ability to produce a settlement in the Middle East?

Faisal-Naturally, everything is predicated on a settlement-and that settlement can only be full Israeli withdrawal from all occupied territories, the restoration of Arab sovereignty over Arab Jerusalem, the right to self-determination for the Palestinian people and their right to return to their homeland. We are not making any threats. We believe the special relationship is in the inter-

Answer-Precious time has already been wasted in recent months. If there has been a loss of momentum and of the sense of urgency, we not only deplore it but feel it is very dangerous. There is not a moment to be lost. We hope and pray that the United States will be able to make Israel see the light and withdraw.

Question-Some Arab leaders I have talked to fear that the United States acts decisively only when it is faced with a crisis. And they say that real American pressure on Israel to withdraw will come only when there is another crisis.

We do not wish to set deadlines, but one should not forget that a year has elapsed since the October war. And it is not unreasonable to expect that Israell evacuation should begin before the end of this year. 220 Judges

Federal Appoin —Nixon's Lega

By William Greider

WASHINGTON (WP) -Richard and Eleindienst-sine Nixon has left the government, but his imprint on it will endure for years—a legacy of hundreds of his appointees on federal regulatory agencies and the U.S. judiciary.

Mr. Nixon appointed more federal judges than any of his predecessors—220 of them. His people, furthermore, now fill all the seats on eight regulatory agencies, including the Civil Aeronautics Board, the Federal Communications Commission and the National Labor Relations Board, and they hold the majority on others, including the Federal Reserve Board and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A former American Bar Association president, Bernard Segal, insists that Mr. Nixon's nominees for the federal bench were exceptional in quality-much better than those of some of his prede-cessors in the White House.

"You can't take the credit away from him," Mr. Segal said. "If you're going to condemn him for the things he did that were wrong. as you must, you should also give him credit for the good things he did. The federal judiclary is better off for his being Presi-

That opinion arouses hot dissent in some quarters, particularly among liberals who successfully opposed two Nixon nominees for the Supreme Court and who frown upon several others who

'Scandal'

"The fact is," said civil rights lawyer Joseph Rauh, "what Mix-on did to the Supreme Court is a scandal and he tried to make it easton morse",

Mr. Nixon's impact on the regulatory agencies, which set rates and grant routes and licenses and enforce consumerprotection laws, is an equally volatile question.

John Cushman, executive director of the Administrative Conference of the United States, told the Congressional Quarterly in its survey of the subject: "Generally speaking, the Nixon appointees to these agencies are no better or no worse than those of his pre-

But consumer advocates around Washington denounce Mr. Nixon's regulatory appointments as probusiness in general and often mediocra. They accuse the Nixon administration of tightening the grip that special interests have generally held on the government regulatory machinery.

In two instances, the CAB and Securities and Exchange Commission, Mr. Nixon's regulatory agencies were tainted with the same sort of cozy special-interest dealing that hovered over the Nixon White House. The one striking exception is the Federal Trade Commission, where even the former president's critics agree that the Nixon appointees reinvigorated the enforcement of consumer-protection laws.

On judicial appointments, Mr. Segal bases his high appraisal on Mr. Nixon's consistent acceptance of the ABA's recommendations. When the ABA's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary found a candidate "not qualified," he was not nominated, despite a lot of pressure from Republican senators sponsoring the home-state lawyer.

Only Exception

The only exception was in the closing hours of the Nixon administration when he nominated Connecticut Gov. Thomas Meskill for a seat on the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in New York. The ABA committee found him "not qualified," largely because he lacks courtroom experience as a lawyer, and the nomination is still pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

According to Mr. Segal, that record compares favorably with Mr. Nixon's Democratic predecessors. Lyndon Johnson and John Kennedy, and even with Dwight Elsenhower. Harry Truman usually ignored the ABA committee, Mr. Segal said. "Whatever one thinks of President Nixon," he said, "his judicial appointments have been excellent. Nixon was the only president from Eisenhower on who had no appointments who were not qualified—until the very end." When John Kennedy was president, he nominated eight judges in his first year who did not pass muster with the har association according to Mr. Segal, largely to settle election debts.

An administration official familiar with the Nixon appointees agreed that the new judges have met the ABA's minimum standards, but he said that the federal judiciary is still not getting the best qualified men and women for the bench and it won't get them, he said, until a future president seeks out those who are outstanding candidates_instead of relying exclusively on those who have political sponsors in the largest Banking Group

From a relatively modest beginning at the turn of the last century Centrale Rabobank, which was originally formed to help overcome the difficulties in rural areas, has grown into the largest full service banking organization in Holland.

Structured on a cooperative basis, the bank has remained faithful to its original function as primary banker to the Dutch farming community.

However, today its range of services covers in addition all aspects of economic activities from loans to small enterprises to large scale import/export financing, from mortgages to wholesale banking.

Close on 20,000 employees in more than 3,000 branch offices look after the interests of the bank's

In line with the accelerating international exchange of agricultural products, Centrale Rabobank is rapidly developing its foreign banking business. The participation in London & Continental Bankers Ltd. forms an important part of the bank's policy to strengthen its international capacity.

Another major step was the establishment of a joint subsidiary with the Bank of America, the Rabomerica International Bank in Amsterdam.

There is no doubt in Spain that the account is genuine, although there are doubts that it tells the whole story.

The news magazine Ki-Mundo made the book the subject of a cover story, saying it was the "definite proof" of the authorship of the crime.

Spanish police have held from the beginning that the assassination was the work of Basque Homeland and Liberty (ETA), underground group fighting for the secession of Spain's northern Basque provinces.

has acknowledged responsibility for the killing, saying it was done in revenge for the death of nine of its members in cunfights with Spanish police and to deal Gen. Franco's succession plans a blow.

"Operation Ogre" is a strange mixture of revolutionary tract and documentary thriller which sometimes recalls Frederick Forsyth's "The Day of the Jackal," the story of an assassination attempt against French President Charles de Ganlle. Awaiting the day of the killing, the four assassins in fact went one night to see the movie version of "Jackal." However, their book stresses a difference—"Jackal" was a hired gun: the assessing of Adm. Carrero Blanco were members of a "people's army."

They tell their story from their arrival in Madrid to the rainy. windy December day almost a year later when one of them, dressed as an electrician and standing on top of a ladder. reached up to a wire strung along

In the months before that day, the killers had stalked Adm Carrero Blanco and slowly spun their web. On several occasions. they escaped detection by a hairbreadth. As the "electricisn" reached up to the wire and waited for Adm, Carrero Blanco's car turn into the street, he says he felt that policemen sitting in a jeep parked nearby were lazily eyeing him

Originally "Operation Ogre" was not planned as what the Basques call an "execution" but as a kidnapping. The Premier was to be held as a hostage for the release of political prisoners, among them—the book claims 150 Basque militants sentenced to 10 or more years in prison. But that plan went wrong Adm. Carrero Blanco, a deeply religious man of 70, used to visit Francisco de Borja Jesuit Church a block from his home every morning A disciplinarian of strict habits, he was driven up at 9:20 a.m. sharp accompanied by only an aide and a bodyguard

Day after day the terrorists spied on Adm, Carrero Blanco's churchgoing habits. One of them describes his first close observation of Adm, Carrero Blanco, watching him as he slowly walked through the church to take his habitual seat to the right of the altar, only a few feet from one of the terrorists.

"I immediately called him 'ogre'-a huge chunk of a tough man, with bushy eyebrows, hair growing out everywhere, an impressive character," one of the assassins says.

He describes how the churchgoers kneeled down to pray, and how he watched Adm. Carrero Blanco's bent back two rows ahead of him.

"I carried a gun in my belt," he muses. "...And I was think-ing of how the people always say these men are unkillable, that one cannot touch them." But the terrorists' job at that time was

and they decided to leave their duction and ran the risk of a and his three companions creat-guns at home on future church gun battle in the church.

Once they knew all they wanted to know, the Basques drew up the kidnapping plan. Dressed as priests and hiding submachine guns under their cassocks, they hoped to abduct Adm. Carrero Blanco as he entered the church through a dark passage.

A hideaway "people's prison" was already prepared for Adm. Carrero Blanco and a "hospital" readled for the treatment of any casualties among the terrorists. Then the kidnapping was suddenly called off.

The reason was that Gen. Franco delegated part of his functions - the premiershi - to Adm. Carrero Blanco, which resulted in the number of his bodyguards being increased to four. The terrorists reported to ETA headquarters that they could no longer guarantee a "clean" ab-

ETA then issued orders to kill Adm. Carrero Blanco.

The assassination was put in the hands of four men who appear in the book under the assumed names of Jon, Mikel, Iker and Trabi-the latter the chief of their "Commando Txikia," named after a Basque guerrilla leader and ex-Benedictine monk who had died in a gun battle with police a short time before.

From their accounts, the four appear to be students devoted to a great deal of reading and ideological discussion. ETA considers itself a Marxist revolutionary group. Posing as a sculptor, the man called Iker set the assassination plan in motion by buying a basement apartment in Claudio Coello Street opposite the back side of the church.

The "work of art" which he ed in the next three weeks was a 23-foot-long tunnel reaching to a point under the street where Adm. Carrero Blanco's car passed every day.

It was a dangerous labor, judging from the book. Gas seeped into the tunnel rendering those working inside unconscious at times. The sprezding odor of gas and sewage threatened to give them away to police patrolling the sidewalk. Some of the persons in the building became suspicious of the noises from the basement.

The "sculptor" had hoped his pretended profession would serve as a cover, but one day the janitor knocked on the door and asked to be let into the apartment. which by then was covered with plastic bags full of earth. The terrorists say they knew he also held a job as a city policeman.

At this tense moment, the bed

The last days were dedicated to arming the 110-pound bomb, placing it in the T-shaped end of the tunnel and stringing an electric wire along a full block of house walls.

On the morning of Dec. 20, the terrorists double-parked a car containing another 22 pounds of plastic explosives in the narrow Claudio Coello Street to make sure Adm. Carrero Blanco's black Dodge limousine would pass exactly over the bomb and to give it another blast from the side. The car bomb, incidentally, did not go off.

Txabi posed as the electrician who set off the bomb while one of his companions looked out for the car and the two others acted as getaway drivers.

Waiting for the car, Txabi said he thought policemen in a nearby jeep were eyeing him, although with little apparent interest. A man in a newspaper stand a few feet away repeatedly turned to look at him. Two youths stopped at the foot of the ladder to ask for a light.

None of the four terrorists saw Adm. Carrero Blanco's car gring over the church roof. But the force of the explosion told them that they must have been successful.

Shouting "Gas, gas." they ran past stunned passersby to their getaway car.

"It was simply terrific," one of them said. Then they lrore in tense silence across the heart of Madrid to another waiting car which took them on the escape

After Years of Quarantine

East Germany Has Emerged

By Craig R. Whitney

RONN (NYT) -Since the replacement of Walter Ulbricht by Brich Honecker as the head of the Communist party in 1971. East Germany has emerged from years of international quarantine.

West Germany, in effect, has recognized East Germany as a separate state, without formally admitting it, and 104 Western nations have done the same.

East German officials badly wanted recognition from Washington. This was obtained on Sept. 4. Members of the German intelligentsia speak bitterly of the years of diplomatic isolation they endured during the years before Bonn would consent to anyone else recognizing the separate existence of the German Democratic Republic.

'Gray Area'

East Germany has realized enormous benefits from the detente between Washington and Moscow but East German leaders also maintain that they have made significant concessions to détente. The 1971 four-power agreement on Berlin, for instance, is a remarkable document.

In it, the Soviet Union guaranteed that East Germany would let travelers drive freely over the highways to West Berlin without having to fill in customs forms and without having their automobiles searched. --

The treaty also recognized the West Germany but specified that Born does not have sovereignty

"gray area" that led to the recent fight over Bonn's establishment of a West German environmental office in West Berlin. "We had to give up a great deal for that treaty," an East German said recently. He meant that East Germany formally abandoned its claims to West Berlin. The Soviet Union had judged that détente was worth the sacrifice.

But détente, with its side effect of increasing contacts with Westerners, could have created domestic difficulties in East Germany if reforms had not been mented. Accordingly, the last few years have seen a considerable humanization and relaxation of internal conditions.

The eighth congress of the Socialist Unity party in June, 1971, set a general policy line of improving living standards and access to consumer goods, a welcome change from the harsh line of endless sacrifice to build up industrial production. Curbs on social criticism in literature and the arts also have been eased.

The most visible evidence of the turn to create comforts is a proliferation of new apartment complexes. Old quarters of Berlin, where little maintenance had been done on crumbling apartment buildings since World War II, are getting a face-lifting. The gnal it is said is that by 1990 every East German should have a room of his own

Mr. Honecker and other officials have even taken to admitting that most people can tune in to the West German TV stations. But coexistence with the West does not mean ideological convergence with it. The burghers of Weimar and Leipzig are told that they live in a socialist society with a socialist culture. This policy, called "abgrenzung" or roughly, "walling off." began with detente and logically will grow stronger with

And anyone in West Germany who thought détente was synonymous with friendship should have been disabused of the notion last spring when it turned out that one of former Chancellor Willy Brandt's close aides Guenter Guillaume, was an East German spy, That led to Mr. Brandt's fall which may have been much more displeasing to his detente partners in Moscow than to the leadership in Berlin, who saw his popularity in their own country as a threat, as one said, that "he might have become chancellor of all Germany."

But the difference of opinion on that issue is probably unexploitable by the West.

Erich Honecker

Rome is OK, but Copenhagen...

There are lots of cities in Europe where a weekend is worthwhile. The Eternal City is certainly one of them. But would, should and could you spend all your weekends in Rome -particularly if you happen to live there? Why not consider a weekend in Copenhagen?

Our city is also one of the attractive spots on the touristic map of Europe. Of course we have most of what you can find in other large cities -- plus something which is difficult to explain and define: a specific atmosphere of friendliness and what with an absolutely untranslatable term we call "hygge". Come and see for yourself. Transport companies and travel agencies offer special fares and packages in the fall and winter season.

Belgium's leading Cooperative Banking Group

The Belgian Raiffeisenbanks and the Central Raiffeisenbank ICERAI constitute together the Belgian Raiffeisenorganization: At their disposal is a network of some 1,000 contact points all over the Country. CERA ranks among the foremost financial institutions in the Belgian private banking sector and is, at the same time, the largest private savings bank in the Country.

CERA has always been extremely active in the financing of agriculture and the agricultural industries: Thus, for instance, CERA finances half the Belgian dairy industry. Today CERA has developed into a full service tinancial institution, welcoming any and all customers and offering a wide choice of banking services. A case in point is the important participation of CERA in the Eurocheque system.

During 1973 the positive development of the last

CERA's lending activity also developed favourably notwithstanding the quantitative restrictions on credit imposed by the Monetary Authorities. In 1973 the Raiffeisen institutions granted a total of 19,600 credits in the amount of 8.8 thousand million Belgian francs. Among the business and industrial loans, leasing contracts are becoming increasingly more important.

Tactics in the UN

That the United Nations General Assembly should discuss the Palestinians goes without saying. Apart from the UN's general mandate to secure peace in international disputes, it was the world organization that originally proposed the division of the British mandate in Palestine into Jewish and Arab states. The question is not whether the case of the Arab Palestinians should be heard, but in what context. To do so, as in the past, as part of a general debate on the Middle East, makes sense; to do so as a separate item on the agenda, before the broader discussion, may seem important only as a parliamentary tactic. But it is tactics that make strategy practicable, and this particular tactic poses serious problems.

When the Arab states refused to accept the partition proposal and sent their armies into Palestine, the initial UN plan was warped out of all resemblance to its concept, and Arab Palestine virtually disappeared, shared, when the fighting died down, among Israel, Jordan and Egypt. The uprooted Palestinians were scattered among camps all around the periphery of their old home, and were slow in acquiring the militant nationalism (and terrorism) that now marks their cause. It will be impossible now to debate that cause apart from the tangle of interests which other nations now have vested in the Palestinians and to attempt to do so would prejudice the more general settlement which the Middle East must have if it is ever to know peace again,

That an independent Palestine may emerge from such a settlement must not, of course, be ruled out. The Israelis would not like such a neighbor: the Jordanians are at least cool to it, and they are the two states that have the most practical concern for the fate of the Palestinians and their land. But Jordan and the other Arab states seem to be moving toward an agreement with the Palestinians that would permit the creation of a government that would not necessarily regard itself as a fragment of an irridenta. dedicated to eternal hostility to Israel, Such an agreement may well be the best hope for all concerned.

The real threat in the debate about Palestine is that a number of countries outside the actual embattled area, fired by the kind of Third World dogmatism that China has been inculcating, or the Islamic Jihad philosophy of, say, Libya, would undoubtedly use the occasion for inflammatory speeches and resolutions that could push the countries primarily concerned-Israel and her neighbors-into another fatal and futile confrontation. And it is this that those nations, as well as the countries which feel a genuine responsibility for restoring Middle Eastern affairs to some kind of decent order, must stand guard against. The world has too many troubles in insuring the ecological survival of mankind to be diverted by another

Untimely Fish Bill

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has presented an adverse report on a proposal to extend U.S. jurisdiction over coastal fishing to 200 miles, in flagrant violation of existing international law. The Senate would do well to abide by this committee's decision rather than that of the Commerce Commitsee, which has given the bill its support.

This country's commercial fishermen are. understandably concerned over the depletion of domestic stocks by foreign fleets. They are also discouraged by the failure of the recent law of the sea conference at Caracas to formulate a new international fisheries agreement. But the federal government is making a long-overdue effort to preserve stocks through more rigid enforcement of existing international agreements. And there is still reasonable hope that a comprehensive new body of sea law-including an acceptable fisheries formula-will be adopted at the international conference when it reconvenes in Vienna next spring.

Any move by the United States to extend Its fisheries zone unilaterally at this time would encourage other nations to stake out similar or even more drastic claims to ocean control. The effect could be to jeopardize other vital American interests at sea-such as the right of free passage through international straits or the opportunity to conduct scientific research off foreign coasts. It could also destroy all hope for a new international treaty to regulate the uses of the oceans. This untimely bill deserves burial on Capitol

We cannot repress our anger at the repeated outrages of Japanese guerrillas. Their action this time is, needless to say, inhuman. It is very understandable that they should not go unpunished, but their demands must be met for the sake of the hostages.

A Harmless Weapon

It is not the first time the United States brandishes the threat to respond to the oil offensive with a reduced food supply. But this time the threat is pronounced by the President himself before the UN General Assembly. Such a threat is not made to rekindle the moral image or "generous America." But it is true that the world is somewhat in a state of "economic war." Moreover, the weapon Mr. Ford is now brandishing appears harmless. To be convinced, let's just take a look at the way U.S. aid is distributed. In 1973, the $900 million of food went mostly to South Vietnam, South Korea, Indonesia, Pakistan, Bangladesh and Israel. Arab countries received crumbs: Tunisla and Morocco $15 million to $20 million each; Jordan less than $10 million; Syria between $200,000 and $300,000. Egypt received nothing between 1968 and 1973, then American aid was resumed at an annual rate of $1 million. . . . Thus, no oil exporting country beside Indonesia received any food supply

Mrs. Peron's Courage

Senora "Isabelita" Peron has confounded some prophets by still being head of state and head of government of Argentina, three months after the death of her husband, Juan Peron. When the former dictator, who had been invited back from his long exile by the baffled military who had been trying to run the country in increasing frustration, died in July, there were many who thought his widow's succession could be no more than a stop-gap gesture, which would suffice to keep things calm for perhaps a few weeks. It is too early to say with certainty that something like this will not in fact turn out to be the case in the end. but there has already been time for her to show that her intention is to rule if she can. One must pay tribute to her courage and determination. There can be few countries more difficult to rule than Argentina in its present

Perhaps even more serious than the food problem is the impact of the oil price increase on the international balance of payments. The United States is running a heavy deficit largely because of the increased payments for oil. So are all the other industrialized countries.

Not Disastrous

That almost certainly means a lesser stress than President Nixon put on settlement in the Near East and on détente with the Soviet Union.

A good way to sense the difference is to consider the staggering impact of the threefold price increase enacted by the cartel of oil-producing countries over the past 18 months. Something like half the rise in American wholesale prices over the past year springs directly from that increase. The inflation raging in most of the other countries of the world is even more closely

So is the world food crisis. Fertilizer, a petroleum product, has risen in price step by step with oil. The countries that most require fertilizer are those least able to pay because they have to spend their precious dollar assets on oil itself. So India, Pakistan, Sri Lanka and several other nations most severely affected by the oil price rise are threatened

For the United States the impact is not disastrous. The oilproducing countries, unable to buy goods with their receipts, invest the money in the most stable foreign economies. That means America mainly, and to a lesser extent West Germany, Ja-

But every serious effort to meet the oil problem runs athwart policies put into effect by President Nixon. The most obvious measure would be to insist on a break in the oil price in exchange for this country's good efforts in promoting a settlement in the Near Fast, But President Nixon didn't want to jeopardize his diplomatic moves by mixing in vulgar commercial interests. For fear of alienating the Arabs and thus spoiling his negotiation he did not apply any pressure for an oil price break, and his effort to wheedle down the price by being nice to the Saudis has obviously not worked.

Countercartel

A second tactic would be to organize the consuming countries in a kind of countercartel President Nixon had taken some steps here, notably in promoting the Washington energy conference of oil-consuming countries.

But cooperation with such mafor oil consumers as Japan. France and even Britain has been sticky. A large part of the reason is that President Nixon had placed so much more emphasis on détente with Russia than on cooperation with this

President Nixon declared the crisis was over as soon as the first progress was made toward an easing of tension between Israel and the Arab states. And in the absence of a crisis atmosphere, it has been impossible to take steps toward American self-sufficiency. In short, President Nixon's emphasis on settlement in the Near East and détente with Russia implied living with higher prices. Some Thoughts on Neo-Isolationism

By William V. Shannon

WASHINGTON.—If this were a or pay for it or lead the way book instead of a newspaper column, I would give it one of those fashionably long titles such as "Some Preliminary Thoughts on America's World Responsibilitles Upon Being Denounced as a Neo-Isolationist."

Recently I have suggested that Cyprus is not an American responsibility and recalled earlier "crises" in Lebanon, Laos, and the Dominican Republic that, like Cyprus today, were exagger-ated by presidents and the press as no real American national interest was involved.

It is a small but interesting

cine to public opinion that my column on Cyprus evoked more mail than any other subject on which I have written and that it was overwhelmingly favorable to my position. But it is to the minority of letters, several of e nd raising the spectre of neo-isola-tionism to which I want to address myself.

Everyone agrees in theory that the United States ought not to be the world's policeman. But in practice as each situation arises there inevitably goes up the cry for American leade It always seems that if the world's strongest richest nation does not act, no one will. Mr Dale's closing comment in finding a solution for it." Americans of every political persuasion are becoming rather weary of this unrelenting round of diverse responsibilities. Yet when one attempts to define standards by which this nation's real interests can be measured. anomalies and contradictions immediately show up.

Clearly, what happens in Can-ada and Mexico is of vital concern to us because they are our neighbors. Because of a shared heritage of culture, law, and free political institutions, we are deeply involved in the fate of Britain, the other democracies of Western Europe, and—by extension—Australia and New Zealand.

It is also in America's national interest to help our ex-World War II enemies-West Germany and its industrial Ruhr and to stay in the ranks of the free and friendly nations.

No Sense

Old Testament people.

History, too, imposes responsibilities. Neither Israel nor West Berlin could have survived this long without American military and economic aid. Each succeeding president since Harry Truman in 1948 has strongly reaffirmed America's support.

Vital Interests?

Are these two vulnerable positions vital interests in the sense that the United States would fight for them? One can answer that with another question. Would the Russians have fought if we had tried to help the Hungarians or the Czechs during their unsuccessful struggles for freedom? The United States did not know the answer but decided not to take the risk of finding out. As long as the United States remains ong, the Russians are likely to be equally prudent.

In thinking about America's ose of obligation to West Berlin and Israel, these two poignant, perpetually endangered orphans from the storm of World War II, one is reminded of Robert Frost's poem in which the husband and wife gently argue whether they have a duty to help their former

He says, "Home is the place where, when you have to go there, they have to take you in." His wife replies, "I should have called it, something you somehow haven't to deserve." If the people of West Berlin

And then you burst out of a mountain tunnel to confront the vigcross city across the river-the Golden Triangle ablaze with skyscraper lights, a colored geyser sending water into the smogless

Things look better here than in New York, where distress hangs heavy over the financial markets and worldwide financial discuption seems only the next bank failure away. Partly, it is a difference in the nature of the two cities. Pittsburgh is a workingman's town, fond of a shot and a beer. The basic industries that make Pittsburgh great—steel, aluminum, oil—have never had a better year. And, with the ex-ception of the Westinghouse Electric Corp., the big companies that call Pittsburgh home seem to be doing well. New Yorkers find Pittsburgh lacks financial sophistication. The flow of funds out of savings institutions and into higher-interest-paying investments is much less here than it is farther east. Maybe Pittsburgh doesn't understand the problem, but things are calmer here. Unemployment is above the national average, but this seems no real problem There are of course painful memories of the great Depression, and the business editor of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Jack Markowitz, acknowledged in a column last week, "Folks are worried about a return of the Big D." But neither he nor local industrialists seem to see any need for hand-wringing or de-

It was into this atmosphere our dilemma of soaring inflation last week that leaders of business on the one hand and incipient and industry came for one of President Ford's ongoing conferences on the problems of in-flation and the economy. Only reduced federal spending now and some of the businessmen were Pittsburgh point of view.

The view is that there is still from Pittsburgh. But they all seemed to represent a sort of

on the one hand and incipient recession on the other. The policies advocated by the busia balanced budget next year, some moderation of tight money policies, no wage-price controls, tax incentives to spur productive expansion and relaxation of s lot of strength left in the American economy and that the right policy mix can deliver us from health and safety programs.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (NYT).-The stock market made its best advance in months last week, spurred by investors' expectations that tight-money pressures were easing.

The U.S. Economic Scene

Unflustered View From the 'Golden Triangle'

At the end of trading Friday the Dow Jones industrial average had risen 43.57 points during the week to 670.76.

Most major groups of stocks rose last week. The strongest were the blue chips, glamour issues and drug stocks. One of the best performers was International Business Machines, which climbed 19 1/2 points to close at 171 1/2. Last week the company disclosed plans to increase prices on some of its data-processing equipment. IBM's high this year was 254.

Prices on the New York Stock Exchange rose in the first two trading sessions of the week, finished mixed Wednesday and climbed sharply Thursday, when the Dow was up 22.14 points (it's biggest gain since Aug 7, when it added 23.78 points). On Friday, however, the market ended mixed.

Trading was active except on Tuesday and Wednesday when volume was affected by observance of Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish new

Last week's upswing in the market was encouraged by recent reductions in some short-term interest rates as well as predictions by leading bankers that the prime rate, now generally 12 per cent, would decline soon. The prime rate is the interest banks charge their most credit warthy customers.

Some brokers noted that the market had rallied several times earlier this year on indications that record interest rates were about to fall. However, each time the rally quickly faded when the expected rate reductions did not materialize.

Also helping to swell last week's advance was considerable short covering as traders sought to reduce their risks in case stock prices continued to advance. In a short sale, traders sell stock they don't own in the expectation that the price will decline. Later they must for government employment programs to ease the plight of the jobless and scattered suggestions for tax surcharges on individual incomes above, say, $15,000 a year, to help bring the federal budget into balance. After hearing what the businessmen had to say, Rep. Garry Brown, R-Mich., commented, "Every group in the economy wants every other group to do more than they do." This, then, is the essence of the problem encountered in the search for solutions to the nation's economic muladies. Each group tailors a program in its own self-interest and makes only the barest concession to helping the other fellow bear part of the burden.

Secretary of Commerce Prederick Dent, who served as chairman of the business meeting in Pittsburgh Monday and a similar meeting in Detroit Thursday, said in advance that the con-ferences should give the nation a better understanding of "how business leaders can contribute to the fight against inflation." But when asked at a news conference after the Pittsburgh meeting what contribution business had offered to make, Mr. Dent said he had heard "a strong sense of commitment to expand production." The corollary, of course, is that in order to expand productive capacity (and thereby expand its potential for higher profits) business is asking for a financial incentive, such as a higher investment-tax credit or accelerated depreciation allowances. The cecrease in taxes to the government from such moves would have to be made up by higher taxes elsewhere or cuts in federal spending if the other business objective of a balanced budget is

GZB - Genossenschaftliche Zeniralbank AG, headquariered in Vienna, ranks among the top financial institutes in Austria. It is the financial epicentre of Austria's Raiffeisen Organization and its service tacilities cover the broad range of "universal" banking.

46 years young, GZB achieved a balance sheet total of AS 20.9 thousand million laround £ 490 million) at the end of 1973. The vital statistics of the entire Railfeisen Organization underline the overall strength and financial capacity of GZB, its head institute.

On December 31, 1973 total deposits stood of AS 52.6 thousand million (approx. £1,220 million) the equivalent of 18.6% of the total market. Creati volume reached AS 45.7 thousand million (£1,055 million) or a 16.2% market share and the combined balance sheet totals exceeded on impressive AS 100 thousand million (£ 2,300 million). A network of around 2,000 offices spans the entire service area.

Behind these figures there is a long-term financial marketing concept embracing a grouping of specialized institutes that offer a comprehensive service in financial and related fields. It includes a building and loan association, a life insurance company, a new issue institute, a travel service organization, a leasing company, a databank and a major holding in one of Austria's foremost investment companies.

To extend the range of GZB's universal services a participation was acquired in a foreign trade organization having 61 offices and a staff of more than 1,400 spread throughout the world.

A major move of GZB to strengthen its international network was the decision to become a founding shareholder in London & Continental Bankers Ltd.

This participation fits ideally in the structural planning of Austria's Raiffeisen Organization. This merchant bank, bringing similarly-based European banks together, is performing many specialized banking functions in the City of London. It also serves as an ideal international financial base for its shareholders especially in view of the rapidly expanding Euromarkets.

Through its participation in London & Continental, GZB brought Europe even closer to its Austrian clientele and intensified its contacts with the United Kingdom.

OKO-A major Finnish Banking Group presents

the sign ф of modern Finnish banking

Throughout Finland — from the big cities to the smallest hamlets — you'll find the sign of the cooperative banks. It denotes financial stamina — more than 1/5 of total deposits in Finland — and a youthful, open-door approach to all banking activities.

OKO, which stands for Osuuspankkien Keskuspankki Oy, is the short name for the central bank of Finland's vast cooperative banking group. With an internationally oriented management, OKO is the one Finnish bank that knows its market intimately for its organisation is far-flung covering the whole nation, with a broad dientele ranging from the smallest farming units to the biggest Finnish industries.

OKO's foreign department can, of course, provide any and all banking services to international customers, but in addition it can help you in seeking first class business contacts in Finland. As a full service commercial bank, OKO is offering the full range of financial services that one expects from a top credit institution, but with a difference - efficient friendliness.

cooperatives with over 121/2 million members. These in turn are being serviced by close on 5,500 local banks with a total of 19,000 branches.

Around 60% of all animal feed and fertilizer is bought by German farmers from their local cooperatives, and the market share for grain is an impressive 51%. In addition, 43% of all vegetables in Germany are handled by the cooperatives and 74% of all milk demand is filled by its members. Impressive figures? Certainly, but they tell only half the story - the traditional, agricultural one. DGK and its member banks also account for dose on 17% of total deposits with all German credit institutions, and the Group's market share is on the rise.

Either on its own or through a member institution, DGK provides the whole gamut of banking services on a domestic and international scale. They range from term credits to factoring, from stock broking and bond dealing to issuing its own bearer bonds. Money market, foreign exchange dealing and underwriting activities are also part of DGK's full "universal" banking facilities - available to all austomers.

And internationally?

DGK was the first German bank to establish a fully fledged merchant bank in the City of London, as the majority shareholder in close concert with Europe's other major Central Cooperative Banks. This merchant bank is called London & Continental Bankers Limited. In Luxembourg, DGK is a major partner in BHF-BANK-DGK International.

Cooperative banking to the DGK means complete financial services for the broad spectrum of Germany's business community, combined with prudent international expansion enabling it to provide all necessary banking facilities.

DGK's strength does not so much lie in its dominant position, but rather in the confidence and strong support from its millions of members coming from the very grass roots of Germany's economic life.

The need, of course, extends for beyond Luxembourg—a point stressed by Ludwig Poullain, of Westdentsche Landesbank. In a speech here to journalists last week, he called for the creation of an international liquidity bank "with the collaboration of the central banks and the participation of the banks in the Euromarket,"

The West German liquidity bank, as currently envisaged, would include the participation of the Bundesbank, which would hold a 30 per cent interest. Mr. Dondelinger thought the Poullain suggestion was "a good ides." But he added he was doubtful about whether it could be realized—a view shared by a number of commercial bankers. In private conversation, a number of bankers expressed eservations about such ideas Banking is the second oldest profession in the world," a banker observed. "The rules are well known and, if they are adhered to, there are no problems. "Lending long with short money is suicide. It's bound one day to collapse. You must match your risks on currencies and maturities."

Navy Makes Some Big Waves With 7-6 Upset of Penn State UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa., Sept. 22 (WP).-Navy scored another important victory at sea yesterday. In conditions that resembled the North Atlantic more than a college football game, the Midshipmen shocked 24-point favorite Penn State, 7-6.

Navy's most significant victory in years came about as its defense and driving rain and wind caused seven fumbles.

"I don't know how in the nell we won it," coach George Welsh said. "They beat us up in the second half, but we hung in there. That's right. Beating Army won't feel this good." Navy had just one strong drive in the game, but it was an 80yarder that ended with fullback Bob Jackson sliding left on an option play, holding up and hitting wide-open Robin Ameen with a pass in the end zone from four yards. Steve Dykes, who kicks with the front part of his shoe cut off, literally put his toe to the extra point, drove it true and long and the defense kept it the margin of victory through an almost uninterrupted Penn State assault in the second half. Penn State's enthusiasts, in perhaps the worst weather here in a decade, considered Navy's 7-0 lead at the half merely a challenge to the Nittany Lions, not a serious threat to their winning streaks of 21

When it was 7-0 after three quarters, there was concern. Then Penn State finally scored on a five-yard pass from Tom Shuman to Jerry Jeram. But the Navy defense rose and spoiled the two-point try

India Gains Davis Cup Final As Amritraj Duo Tops Russia

POONA, India, Sept. 22 (AP). India defeated the Soviet Union, 3 matches to 1, in the Davis Cup tennis semifinals today when Anand Amritrai beat Teimuraz Kakulia, 6-2, 8-10, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

The finals, to be played Oct. 13-15, will match India with the winner of the Italy-South Africa semi-finals set for Johannesburg Oct. 3-5.

However there was a possibility the Indian government might bar India from competing if South Africa advanced to the

Heldman Upsets King in Semifinal

ORLANDO, Fla., Sept. 23 (AP). Top-seeded Billle Jean King and third-seeded Françoise Durr were upset victims yesterday in the semi-final round of this $50,000 stop on the women's professional tennis tour. King, the U.S. Open champion, was stopped by fellow-American Julie Heldman 2-6, 6-1, 6-4, while Czechoslovakian teen-ager Martina Navratilova ousted Durr, of France, 5-7, 7-6, 6-1.

finals, a sports commentator on the government radio said: "Let's hope Italy wins the other semifinals so we can be assured of playing in the finals." R.K. Khanna, secretary of the All-India Lawn Tennis Association, has already said that India will not play against South Africa in the finals under any circumstances

India played in the Davis Cup finals only once before, when it lost to Australia in 1966 after defeating Brazil in the semifinals.

India and Russia split the opening singles here Friday, but then India took the doubles and the first reverse singles to clinch the semifinals. India's Amritraj brothers, Vijay and Anand, today completed their doubles victory, 13-15, 7-5, 19-17, 6-3, over Alex Metreveli and Vladimir Korotkov. Anand was a tired man when began his singles against Teimuras Kakulia a half hour after the doubles ended. The doubles had lasted 4 hours 40 minutes during the two days of play.

Kakulia came in fresh after a day's rest, not having competed in the doubles. But he developed leg cramps in the fifth game of the fourth set when he was in top form and he became an easy victim. The final match, between Vijav

Amritrai and Metreveli was abandoned because of bad light with Metreveli leading, 2-6, 6-4, after Gators defensive back Wayne Fields intercepted a pass

Wisconsin Stuns Nebraska on Late Touchdown

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 22 (AP). -Gregg Bohlig's 77-yard touchdown pass to Jeff Mack with 3 minutes 29 seconds left gave Wisconzin a 21-20 upset of fourthranked Nebraska yesterday.

Bohlig's toss came after Nebraska got a first down at Wisconsin's two-yard line but had to settle for a 22-yard field goal Mike Coyle to give the Cornhuskers a 20-14 lead.

Two plays later, Mack. senior flanker, caught Bohlig's pass at the Wisconsin 35 and outraced defenders to the end zone. Bohling had 242 yards passing for the game.

Wisconsin safety Steve Wagner intercepted Earl Everett with 2:40 to play as the Badgers ran out the clock

Everett, a sophomore, quarterbacked Nebraska most of the way after star passer David Humm left with a hip injury in the second quarter.

Texas 34. Wyoming 7 At Austin, Texas, all-American Roosevelt Leaks, playing in his first game since injuring his knee in a spring practice, went five yards for a touchdown in the third quarter as Texas subdued Wyoming, 34-7. Texas scored on its first three possessions for a 20-0 lead. Grayln Wyatt's 27yard run, Mike Presley's 10-yard dash and Earl Campbell's fouryard run got the touchdowns. Leaks entered the game as halfback on Texas' second possession and gained 25 yards on his first run. Iowa 21, UCLA 10 At Iowa City, Rob Fick threw two touchdown passes and Iowa ended a 12-game losing streak with a 21-10 defeat of highlyrated UCLA. Iowa, a 21-point underdog, scored two touchdowns within 52 seconds of the second quarter on passes of 38 and 30 yards by Fick. Iowa marched 91 yards in 14 plays for the clinching touchdown in final minute. · Oregon 27, Air Force 23 At Eugene, Ore., Rick Kane's second touchdown of the final quarter, a one-yard run with 1:27 left, pushed Oregon to a 27-23 victory over Air Force. Kane, a sophomore, climaxed a 56-yard drive engineered by quarterback Norval Turner, as Oregon squared its record at 1-1. Florida 17, Maryland 19 At Tampa, Fla., Lee McGriff got past two defenders into the end zone after catching a thirdquarter pass to give Florida a 17-10 upset over 14th-ranked Maryland. McGriff's five-yard run after catching a 13-yard pass from quarterback Jimmy Fisher came at Maryland's 35 and returned returning one 33 yards for the

it to the 28. The winless Terrapins, who had lost 31-16 to Alabama last week, were stunned in the second quarter when Florida freshman Tony Green streaked 74 for a touchdown and a 7-3 lead.

N.C. State 31, Clemson 10 At Raleigh, N.C., Stan Fritts scored three second-half touchdowns to ignite 15th-ranked North Carolina state to a 31-10 Atlantic Coast Conference victory

Tenn. 17. Kansas 3 At Knoxville, Tenn., sophomore Randy Wallace, substituting for alling Condredge Holloway, directed Tennessee to a 17-3 victory over Kansas in an error-filled

Holloway, nursing knee and shoulder injuries suffered in Tennessee's season-opening tie with UCLA, got into the contest for one play and set up the Volun-teers' first touchdown. On an apparent field-goal attempt from the Kansas 22 late in the first period, Holloway nailed Tommy West with a 15-yard pass to the Jayhawk seven-yard line. Two plays later, Stanley Morgan scored from the one.

Alabama 52, So. Miss. 0

Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant used 51 players in the first period against the outmanned Golden Eagles as the Tide picked up its second victory against no losses. Southern Mississippi now is 1-1.

0-10 his senior year and he did not have a chance to kick an extra point until the sixth game of the season.

Minois 41, Stanford 7 At Stanford, Calif., Illinois defensive back Mike Gow inter-

over Clemson.

At Birmingham, Ala, quarterback Richard Todd led Alabama's offense to touchdowns the first three times it had the ball and the fifth-ranked Crimson Tide went on to crush Southern Mississippi, 52-0. Todd ran 11 yards for one touchdown, passed 42 to Russ Schamun for another and set up the next with a 40-yard keeper to the five. Randy Billingsley then scored on a run. Alabama averaged 11.7 yards a play on the three drives.

Okla. State 26, Arkansas 7

At Little Rock, Ark., sophokicking specialist Abby Daigle booted a school record of four field goals and the Oklahoma State defense throttled Arkansas for three quarters to lead the Cowboys to a 26-7 upset victory over the 10th-ranked Razorbacks. Daigle hit on field goals of 21, 27, 33 and 23 yards. Daigle was overlooked in high school because his team went

two games this season, Miami (Obio) 7, Purdue 7

At West Lafayette, Ind., Steve Sanna threw a wobbly 35-yard touchdown pass to Ricky Taylor with less than three minutes to play and Miami of Ohio salveged a 7-7 tie with Purdue. The tie snapped Miami's 13-game winning streak.

Texas A&M 21, LSU 14

At Baton Rouge, La., sophomore quarterback David Walker directed Texas A&M on a 37-yard scoring drive in the fourth quarter as the Aggles upset Louislana, State, 21-14. The winning touchdown came on a one-yard plunge by fullback Bucky Sams.

After LSU had fought back to a 14-14 tie late in the third quarter, the Aggies got the ball on a fumble. Two plays later, Walker ripped off a 17-yard gainer to open the winning drive.

Pittsburgh 27, Ga. Tech 17 At Atlanta, all-American Tony Dorsett scored two touchdowns and rushed for 168 yards to spark Pittsburgh to a 27-17 triumph over Georgia Tech. Dorsett, the Panthers' brilliant sophomore. brought Pitt from behind on the first play of the final quarter when he knifed across from the one to make the score 20-14.

Michigan 31, Colorado 0 At Ann Harbor, Mich., Dennis Franklin, Rob Lytle and Chuck Heater led highly-ranked Michigan to a 31-0 victory over Colorado. Franklin, all-Big Ten quarterback who was sidelined by a virus during Michigan's opene: last week, passed and rushed for

171 yards. He scored on a fumble recovery and tossed one touchdown pass. Ohio State 51, Oregon State 10

At Columbus, Ohio, the Oriffin brothers combined for three touchdowns and Len Willis returned a kickoff 97 yards as second-ranked Ohio State walloped Oregon State, 51-10. Freshman Ray Griffin, in his first college game, scored on runs of nine and 12 yards and his more heralded older brother, Archie, tallied from the 19.

Notre Dame 49, Northwestern 3 At Evanston, Ill., top-ranked Notre Dame, after a stuttering start, scored 21 points in the third quarter starting with Ron on the jacket, is "the near future." The place is New Haven, Conn. At the outset the narrator says: "The tightpacked column of citizens four abreast stretches back slong Church Street to the corner of Ehm Street and around toward Orange and out of sight but not imagination. I have been on this line since deep dark, since before five." The narrator—his name, we eventually learn, is Sam Poynter—goes on: "As usual at this hour, downtown streets are glutted with buses and cargo conveyors and people shuffling on foot to their jobs. Every square inch of concrete and asphalt is taken up. Wheeled traffic worms along at the stipulated pace. On this sidewalk, at the outer edge of our wattline to the right, one infinity of pedestrians, facing us, inches toward Eim and another, beyond, toward Chapel, It takes a walker fifteen or twenty minutes to move a single block. This is the familier suffocating physical crush of the morning hours; breast touches shoulder blade, hip rubs hip, one's shoes are scuffed by others' shoes."

The population explosion, we perceive, has reached New Haven, The multitudes are boused in buildings like dormitories, each floor providing the largest pos-sible number of living quarters. "A person's space is defined by times painted on the sleeping-hall floor. One must keep all his belongings within his space; trespessing except during communal hours, even 'trespassing' by accidental knocking over of possessions, is severely punished." Sam's space, now that he is separated from his wife, is seven feet by eleven. He and his wife had a somewhat larger space, but there was the same lack of privacy, and this inhibited her in their sexual relations. Children, incidentally, are no great problem, for no family may have more than one child, and most families are not allowed to have any. Throughout his career, Mr. Hersey has shown a tendency toward allegory and fable; almost

To reduce the principles of strategy to hard and fast rules of play is an impossible task. Although innumerable instruction books do try, in an attempt to achieve simplicity, they then cannot help but promulgate a false, ex-cessively dogmatic view of the game.

For example: It is generally true that a backward pawn is a weakness, since it cannot be defended by another pawn and since the advance of the pawns adjacent to it produces a blind square ahead of it that can serve as an important outpost for the opponent. Yet if you try to convert that general truth into a rule forbidding the creation of backward pawns, some strong moves will be neglected.

The cramping action of a pawn advance that leaves its neighbor backward while pinning down an enemy weak-ness may result in over-all advantage. The disadvantage of yielding the opponent an outpost square in front of the backward pawn may turn out to be vacuous if the only pieces that could use the square are exchanged off or otherwise unable to reach it.

The ninth-round game be-tween the United States grandmaster Lubomir Kava-lek and the Argentine master Debarnot from the Torneo Internacional de Ajedrez in Lanzarote, Grand Canary Is-lands, illustrates such exceptional strategy.

Debarnot permitted Kava-lek to transpose what began as an English Opening Into a Maroczy-bind Sicilian De-fense by 5 P-K4. Since Black obtains a cramped position, unable to advance a center pawn to the fourth rank, Debarnot forced the exchange of a pair of knights by Petrosian's favorite tactic,

Russia Evens Hockey Series With WHA Stars

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, Sept. 22 (AP).—Team Canada coach Billy Harris said yesterday that the Russian hockey team is probably the best in the world but insisted that his squad still can win the eight-game international series. "It will take a tremendous effort from everybody on our team," he said after Team Canada's 8-5 defeat that evened the seiles at one victory each, with one tie. Repeating his theme that the World Hockey Association does not win to gain credibility among North American hockey fans, Harris said the Russians had a minor advantage because the third game was played in the afternoon, depriving the veteran Canadians of an additional eight hours of rest.

"I suggested our conditioning would work against us in the first few games," he said. "I'm pleased that we're even after three games." Captain Pat Stapleton, who said the large size of the ice surface in Winnipeg made it tough for anada, said he isn't satisfied to be even.

"If somebody had said we'd be even after three games, I would have canceled the first three and started with the fourth. There's no sense in playing if you don't intend to win," he said.

Stapleton said the Canadian time by the international level of officiating but did not say that referee Victor Dombrowsky of the Soviet Union was a deciding factor in the game.

"It's too bad that two fine hockey teams can't play hockey without the officials being so dominant," said Stapleton.

"It's as bad for the Russians

Canadian players generally said they performed poorly in the first two periods, but Harris disagreed. "We played well in the first period. We came out of it tled 1-1 and we had killed three penalties and had a penalty shot called against us."

Fittipaldi Wins Canada Prix

MOSPORT, Ontario, Sept. 22 (UPI).—Brazil's Emerson Fittipaidl won the Grand Prix of Canada today, running second most of the way but taking over after Niki Lauda of Austria crashed on the 68th lap of the 80-lap race.

Lauda, second fastest qualifier behind Fittipaldi, led from the start in his Ferrari and broke the track race record four times before crashing into the guardrail on the third corner of the tricky 2.549-mile track.

Fittipaldi, nëver more than seven seconds behind Lauda, assumed complete control in his McLaren after Lauda walked away unhart from his crampled car.

The victory gave the surprising Cards sole possession of first place in the National Football League East Division with a 2-0 record. The Redskins, who played without Larry Brown, are 1-1.

St. Louis blunted two Redskin drives in the last three minutes, intercepting a fourth-down pass in the end zone and batting down a desperation 50-yard Kilmer pass at the final gun.

Duane Thomas, starting his first game as a Red skin because of Brown's knee injury, carried 26 times for 96 yards. The Redskins were hampered by dropped passes. Charley Taylor twice muffed Kilmer tosses at the Cardinal five-yard line, and Roy Jefferson

The Nixon Health Caper

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK.—He is a big blond guy who looks like he might have played some football in I asked. college and he is sitting there in the office when I get back from being beaten up in The Case of the Dissonant Tango.

They tell me you're an outmoded old private eye with a bathroom floor. I rolled him over battered heap and too much integrity," he says. "Get to the point," says I.

He says his name is Ford and he is President of the United States. "Sure." says I, "and my Spade and I'm the cracker of The Maltese Falcon Case." He believes me. "Actually," I tell him, 'my name is Philip Marlowe and Im the Baker Lady in the Lake job." He believes that, too. I decide maybe he really is Ford. Pretty soon I am tooling my heap up to San Clemente to solve the Nixon Health Mystery. A guy wearing a business suit and an affidavit face stops me at the gate. A heater bulging on Service agent, so I say, "How's the boss feeling these days?"

"Who wants to know, Shamus?"

I tell him I cannot reveal my client's identify but he's a man in position to transfer Secret Service agents from California to the Bozeman, Mont., field office, and park my heap in a clump of oleander bushes to give the author time to cook up some plot action.

Pretty soon, out comes this bright-eyed jasper who says his name is Bebe. "Don't tell any-body where these came from," he says, slipping me a sheaf of medical charts which look almost as bad as the Dow Jones trend for the last six months. Back in L.A., I put the Bebe documents in a bus station locker when suddenly the phone rings. "This is Eddie Cox speaking, Spade or Marlowe or whoever you are," he said. "Don't believe those medical charts, under-

Fla. Sinkhole Gulps Drill Rig, Trucks

BROOKSVILLE, Fia., Sept. 22 (AP).-A giant sinkhole opened up in the sand hills near this central Florida Gulf Coast town, swallowing a drilling rig, two trucks and other equipment police valued at $100,000.

"T've never seen anything like " a sheriff's deputy said Thursday. "It must be more than 200 feet in diameter and at least 100 feet deep." Three men were

"You mean the big guy is really in the pink, Eddie?"

"He's worse than the charts indicate," the voice says. "Much, much worse, Get me?" the phone clicked dead.

I drove home. He was on the and didn't recognize him, but I realized he was as sick as a man can be. A note stuffed in his lapel buttonhole said, "If you think this man is sick, you ought to see Nixon.

Somebody was playing rough. I throw some water on my face, get in the heap, drive to London and park in a clump of palm trees outside the American Embassy. Three hours later, Ambassador Walter Annenberg comes

"There's a sick man on my bathroom floor and I want to know who put him there," I tell Annenberg. Annenberg says it can't be Nixon. "I just talked to him on the phone. His voice was firm and he seemed completely normal to me," says His Excel-

I am sitting in a New York restaurant trying to figure it out over $7.50 worth of hamburger and beer, If the big fellow is as sick as Eddie says he is, which is twice as sick as Bebe's charts say he is, why does Annenberg say he's got a firm voice?

I am suddenly joined by a big man with rich eyes. He speaks in an aerosol hiss, "You don't know me, Spade, or Marlowe, or whoever you are, but the name is Abplanalp. I'm just going to say it once so listen carefully. Annenberg doesn't know what he's talking about." He is gone.

I drive all night and wind up sitting in the heap in a clump of bayberry bushes outside the Washington home of Dr. Walter Tkach. I grab him on the way to the infirmary.

"How's President health, sawbones?" I ask. "We have never had a president in better health," says he. Then why do Bebe, Eddie and

Abplanalp tell me he's lower than the Dow Jones?" "They're perfectly right," says

"How is it, if we've never had a president in better health. he's too sick to say how he

"Simple," says Tkach. "He's not president anymore."

I am sitting in the Oval Office telling Ford I have cracked the case. "This mystery is so com-plex," I tell him, "that it can never be solved. There is only one man alive who could have masterminded a mystery as impenetrable as this."

"Prof. Moriarty?" asks Ford. "Richard Nixon," I tell him. "And he would have to be in good health to do it?" Ford asks. He believes me.

Italy's First Lady Is Fashion Ambassador

By Bernadine Morris

NEW YORK (NYT).—When President Giovanni Leone of Italy pays a state visit to Washington on Wednesday, the slender, attractive woman with the thick, dark wavy hair at his side is bound to command more than the usual attention.

One reason will be her wardrobe. Vittoria Leone, the President's wife, wears clothes well, enjoys wearing clothes and, beyond that, is regarded by her countrymen as their ambassador of fashion.

Last year, on a state visit to Belgium, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and France, her dresses dazzled. In Italy, where fashion-from fabrics and accessories through clothes—is the No. I industry (automobiles rank second), this is more than a matter of pride.

Italians feel that having an attractive, clothes-minded first lady can call attention to the country's products and spur exports. After all, Italy still generally ranks second to France in the world fashion stakes, and in a country beset with the economic difficulties that Italy has having someone like Mrs. Leone to act as a showcase is an important factor. Just before she leaves for the United States, Mrs. Leone will have Valentino, Rome's leading conturier, supervise the final fittings of her wardrobe. It includes a white evening gown for dinner at the White House Wednesday and a pink one for a dinner at the Italian Embassy the following night. Valentino cut short a trip to New York to be present at the

Showcase

"She's the only first lady we've had since the queen [Queen Maria Jose, who left along with King Umberto in 1946] departed, who can serve as a showcase for Italian fashion," said Count Rodolfo Crespi recently. A social figure around Rome with ties to the fashion industry, he added, "there's no other chance for Italy—the only other showcase we could have is actresses, and Sophia Loren is dressed by

Though Donna Vittoria, as she is known to Italians, worries sometimes about appearing too frivolous, she admits a long-standing interest in clothes.

"I always liked dresses," she said. And takes the trouble to acquire the perfect handbag and the right shoes to go with them. As a result, Mrs. Leone, who is of medium height—she appears taller than her husband—is always immaculately

Mrs. Leone said she honestly believes Italian fashion is the best in the world. "I like the fantasy, the inventiveness, the marvelous colors." she said in a recent interview in one of the myriad drawing rooms of the 16th-century Quirinale Palace she has called home for the last two and a half years. "Our designers are very clever, full of taste." She was dressed neatly but elegantly in a pale gray satin shirt and narrow gray wool skirt. The skirt covered her knees, but then her skirts always cover her knees: she is delighted that hemlines are

"I can understand when a dress is shorter, it can make a woman look younger," she explained, "but I prefer to rear this length because I don't like my

Most of the time, she is dressed by Valentino who, she feels, has the proper touch of elegance and refinement. But she will occasionally add clothes by such designers as Princess Trene Galitzine, Pino Lancetti and Renato Balestra, all couturiers in Rome. She fills in her custommade wardrobe with ready-to-wear things. including simple summer dresses, a long skirt, shirts and pants, because "I'm always running out of things at the last minute," she said. Besides, "It's fun to pick them from the rack—I really don't like fittings." Mrs. Leone's husband and their three sons are her severest critics.

"Sometimes," she recalled, "I want to buy something funny and frivolous, and then the family gets upset and they tell me, 'mother you have gone crasy.' I listen to them, and I thank them, and then I

Not Sympathetic

She was not sympathetic, for example, to a feminist demonstration that she had to pass earlier this year to get into a Valentino showing. "Those women didn't think, when they protested a fashion show," she said, "that making the clothes gave employment to hundreds of women. She personally is against divorce, although Italian voters recently approved a controversial law permitting it. understanding, love, and goodwill, difficulties within the family can be worked out," she insisted. "I know it isn't easy. Everybody in the family must make some sacrifices to achieve it."

Vittoria Leone herself never had any thought of a career outside of marriage. In 1946, at the age of 18, and just out of high school she was married to Leone in her home town of Caserta, north of Naples. Her husband, then a professor of law at the University of Bari was 20 years her senior. A month before their marriage, he was elected to the constituent assembly that was to draft Italy's republican constitution. Before she was 20, the Leones' oldest son, Auro, was born.

To some of her friends from the days before she was the first lady, there are some sad undertones to her present posi-

"A certain seclusion is necessary—she cannot go to the hair-dresser and sit under the dryer, because the other women would bother her with petitions for her husband," one of them explained. "She cannot go to private parties with her husband, because the president of Italy only entertains at home," the friend went on. But if she is bothered by such things,

Mrs. Leone doesn't say. She sees her role in traditional terms; primarily, as a wife and a mother.

appointingly small crowd of 9,900 in the Hollywood Bowl for the start of his 25th anniversary crusade. But it was about double the number who gathered in a Los Angeles revival tent to hear him preach 25 years ago.

A spokesman for Graham estimated that, since 1949, 50 million persons have heard the evangelist at revivals and more than 15 million have "come forward" to dedicate their lives to Christianity.

While he was president, Richard Nixon granted several pardons, the most notable being that bestowed in 1971 upon James Hoffs. That was after Hoffs, former head of the Teamsters Union, had served 6 1/2 years of a 13 1/2-year sentence for jury-fixing and mail fraud. During the taping of a television program, Hoffa was asked for his opinion on the pardoning of Nixon by President Ford.

"It took courage and a sense of loyalty to the American peo ple" for Ford to do it. Hoffe said. He did, however, have some reproving words for Nixon. Hoffa said that the ex-president should have "burned the Watergate tapes and said they are none of your business."

Alabama Gov. George Wallace told that Martha Mitchell had said in a BBC television interview that he had blamed Nixon for the assassination attempt on Wallace in 1972—asserted:

"I did not in any way imply that the president had anything to do with my being shot or that he knew anything about it."

Mrs. Mitchell, interviewed by David Frost, had said that Wallace once told her he had proof that a member of the Nixon reelection committee's so-called "dirty tricks" squad had visited the gunman, Arthur Bremer, before the shooting in May, 1972, which left Wallace partially paralyzed. Mrs. Mitchell caused another stir in Britain yesterday when she refused to be frisked by security guards at London's Heathrow Airport.

"She was shouting and refused to be touched by one of the security girls," an official said. "When we told her she would not be able to fly with us if she was not searched, she calmed down and we used un electronic device to search her. Nothing was found." 9 8.4 Stephen Bingham, the radical

CHICAGO, Sept. 22 (AP).-A sudden, sharp bear hug is credited with having saved the lives of people who started to choke to death on food. It has also been used on some drowning victims.

The pressure from the hug causes food "to pop out like a cork from a champagne bottle," said the surgeon who developed the technique. When applied to drowning persons, "the water gushes out of the mouth."

Dr. Henry Heimlich, director of surgery at Jewish Hospital in Cincinnati, described the technique in the journal Emergency Medicine. He had tested the method on laboratory dogs.

ters telling of lives apparently saved by the method. The choking victim, while conscious, cannot speak. He turns pale, then blue or black. He may soon die if he does not receive aid. Mouth-to-mouth resuscitation only makes matters worse, driving the obstruction deeper into the windpipe. Here is how to perform the · Stand behind the person, with both arms around the waist, under the person's arms. Form a fist with one hand, and grasp it with the other hand, positioning the fist against the abdomen, just the rib cage. Apply pressure forcibly, with a quick upward thrust. Because there is always residual air trapped in the lungs, the sudden sture forces this air upward and the bolus, or obstruction, is expelled. The maneuver may be done if the person is standing, sitting, or draped over the arms. • If the person is lying face down or on his back, different positions are taken to apply either the arm lock or the heel of one hand below the rib cage. With infants, Dr. Helmlich says the best position is to lay them across a knee with the leg pressing against the abdomen be-down and the pressure applied. Dr. Heimlich says he has received three letters telling of lives saved by this method. The surgeon says he devised the method as an alternative to tracheotomy, in which a tube is inserted into the windpipe. The main danger of the new method is that the rescuer will apply too much pressure and crack a rib or two. But, the surgeon said, that is a small price to pay to save a life.
